India Crash Kills 13 U.S. Newsmen; 34 Perish in Crackup in California As Fight Forces Plane Off Course

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Coast-Bound Pilot Called For Police At Burbank

Los Angeles, July 12 (AP).—Minutes after the pilot radioed word of a fight aboard, a nonscheduled C-46 airliner crashed and exploded in flames today in the Santa Susana mountains, killing 34 persons.

Fourteen other persons were still alive after the two-engine plane plowed into a peak at about the 1800-foot level.

Police and Civil Aeronautics investigators were trying to determine what happened between the time the pilot radioed that two passengers were fighting, and the time—25 minutes later—when the plane crashed and burned.

Air traffic control at Burbank said the pilot, Roy White, reported 25 minutes before the crash: "Two of the passengers started fighting over Riverside. I want police at the airport at Burbank and I want one of the men arrested. One man is badly beaten."

Asked to Land at Burbank

The pilot also asked for permission to land at Burbank, 15 miles closer to his position than Long Beach, his next scheduled stop. He never made it.

Detective Douglas C. Ingram of the Los Angeles police said a red-haired woman "obviously delirious, her scalp almost entirely torn away, told us one of the passengers knocked the copilot into the controls and jammed them, causing the crash." The woman died shortly thereafter.

Ingram said his questioning of other passengers discredited this story. He said they told him a fight between the passengers occurred an hour and a half before the plane was due to land in Long Beach.

"Everybody Was Jumpy"

Mrs. Judy Frost, 18, Long Beach, with head, arms and legs swathed in bandages, lay on a hospital bed and told her story.

"About an hour or an hour and a half before the crash," she said, "two men in seats in front of me got in an argument and one of them hit the other.

"Everybody was jumpy because we had had a very rough trip, very bumpy.

"One of the men was smoking incessantly, apparently nervous. Another man turned to him and asked, 'How are you this morning?' Then suddenly he hit the man who was smoking right in the eye. They grappled for a moment and then a stewardess separated them and put them in seats some distance apart."

Actress Gives Account

Caren Marsh, 24, actress daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Morris of Los Angeles, was quoted by her parents as saying:

"The fight took place well in advance of the accident. Suddenly one man awoke from a dream and struck the man next to him. With that, the plane went into a bank of clouds.

"I felt as though I was at a cocktail party, and the next thing I knew there was an unidentified woman dragging me from the plane into a hillside. I heard screams and there were people lying on the ground. Then the plane exploded."

The Lockheed control tower, at Burbank, said the ill-fated plane circled that field once. The pilot was told that other planes were coming in and he was not to land then. When the airliner failed to return at the specified time, the tower operator asked the pilot of a California airliner to make ob-

Journalists Coming Home From Java Among 45 Dead

Bombay, India, July 12 (AP). Thirteen American news correspondents flying home from a six-week tour of Indonesia were killed today in a plane crash. One of them was a woman. The crash killed a total of 45 persons.

A fourteenth American, the New York public relations man who sponsored the Indonesian tour in cooperation with the Dutch government, was among the dead.

Their big KLM (Royal Dutch Airlines) Constellation was circling in a blinding monsoon rain in an attempt to land at Santa Cruz airfield, 15 miles north of Bombay, when it crashed and burned on 800-foot-high Ghatkopar Hill, about 4 miles to the east.

The bylines and broadcasts of the correspondents were familiar to thousands of readers and listeners. Among the victims were two Pulitzer Prize winners.

Victims Are Listed

The American consulate listed them:

H. R. Knickerbocker, 51, radio commentator for WOR, New York, formerly with International News Service, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Chicago Sun and Newark Morning Ledger, a war correspondent in Ethiopia, Spain, China, Europe and North Africa, a Pulitzer Prize winner in 1930.

S. Burton Heath, 50, Newspaper Enterprise Association (NEA), formerly of the Associated Press, New York World-Telegram and Burlington (Vt.) Free Press, a winner of the 1939 Pulitzer Prize for domestic reporting.

Charles Gratke, 48, foreign editor of the Christian Science Monitor, formerly of the Detroit News, Portland Oregonian, Oregon City Enterprise and Astoria Evening Budget.

Miss Elsie Dick, director of women's, religious and educational programs for Mutual Broadcasting System, formerly with the New Yorker and House Beautiful.

Nat Barrows Killed

Nat Barrows, 49, Chicago Daily News, formerly with the Boston Globe, a veteran reporter of South American, European and United Nations affairs whose reporting was cited last May by Sigma Delta Chi, national journalistic fraternity, as the outstanding work of the year.

Bertram Dyer Hulen, 60, Washington staff of the New York Times, formerly of the Associated Press and Springfield (Mass.), Republican.

William H. Newton, 36, Columbus, Ohio, Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance, a correspondent in Europe and China.

Air Crashes Kill 100 Within Last Two Days

By the United Press

Plane crashes killed at least 100 persons in the last two days

At Bombay, India, 45 persons, including 13 American newsmen, were killed when their special Royal Dutch Airlines Constellation smashed into a rocky hilltop in a rainstorm.

Near Los Angeles, a nonscheduled C-46 airliner crashed into a mountain a few minutes after the pilot had radioed that two men were fighting in the cabin. At least 34 were killed and 14 injured.

In Germany, three U. S. airmen aboard a Berlin airlift Skymaster were killed when their plane crashed in the Soviet zone.

U.S. Steel Turns Down Truman on Strike Truce

Fairless Declares Postponement Plan Is an Evasion of Taft-Hartley Law

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday called for a 60-day postponement of the steel industry strike, scheduled for Saturday, pending an inquiry and recommendations by a fact-finding committee.

Immediate reaction to the President's request, issued to the CIO Steelworkers and six major steel companies, was a flat rebuff of the proposed truce by United States Steel Corp.

The President's plan to head off the threatened walkout of one million steel workers is an evasion of the Taft-Hartley Act, charged Benjamin F. Fairless, United States Steel president, in a return wire to the White House.

Later, Republic Steel Corp., and Bethlehem Steel Corp., also rejected the President's proposal on the grounds that it did not comply with the Taft-Hartley law.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. telegraphed the President it would agree to continue operations during the 60-day period he asked. Wheeling Steel, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube company had not replied to the President last night.

Murray to Reply Today

In Pittsburgh, where he is meeting with the Steelworkers' wage-policy committee, CIO President Philip Murray, who also heads the steel union, said late yesterday he would reply to the President's proposal today. Washington officials were at first optimistic of getting an affirmative answer from the steelworkers, but the unexpected reaction of U.S. Steel created confusion.

"We are unwilling to go outside that statute (Taft-Hartley Act), as you propose, and accept a board with power to make recommendations to the parties as to terms of settlement," Fairless said in his telegram to President Truman.

Fairless pointed out that under the Taft-Hartley Act, the board of inquiry could report only on the facts, and not make any recommendations. The question of a fourth round of wage increase should not be determined by the recommendations of such a board, the steel executive declared.

Request by President

If the President wanted to avert the strike, Fairless hinted, then the Chief Executive ought to put into effect the Taft-Hartley Act by declaring that the threatened walkout would imperil the Nation's health and safety. Then, under the act, the President could demand an 80-day cooling-off period, enforced if necessary by a court injunction.

President Truman obviously sought to sidestep the Taft-Hartley Act, which he has fought to repeal, with his own plan for a 60-day voluntary continuation of the present contract between the Steelworkers Union and Big Steel, which expires July 16. He acted only a few hours after Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, visited the White House and reported formally that the contract negotiations were in deadlock.

The President called for the continuation of work in the steel industry in identical wires sent to Murray, and to the heads of United States Steel, Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Bethlehem Steel, Jones and Laughlin, and Wheeling Steel.

Mr. Truman pointed out that "there is no likelihood of a settlement" of the steelworkers' demands for a pay increase, health insurance, and a $150 pension before the July 16 deadline.

"The basic steel industry occupies a strategic and vital position in the economy of the Nation," the President wired. "A cessation of work and operations in that in-

Gag Denied By Johnson In B-36 Probe

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson last night denied congressional charges that he is trying to "censor" the testimony of military officials in the forthcoming B-36 bomber probe.

The charges—made yesterday before the House Armed Services Committee—stirred up an immediate, bitter row, and had these far-reaching results:

1. Sidetracked the pending military unification bill until after the B-36 investigation is complete. Members said the 13-to-12 committee vote probably shelves the measure until next year.

2. Puts the military pay increase bill in danger. Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee, which has the pay measure under study, said many Senators are opposed to boosting the military budget for this purpose unless the unification

11,000 More Join Strike at London Docks

Walkout Threatens To Spill Over Into Associated Trades

London, July 12 (NYHT).—Work stoppages spread in the London docks today, and for the first time threatened to spill over into associated trades.

In its first day, the government's declaration of a state of emergency appeared to be having an effect exactly opposite to that intended. It increased the number stopping work from approximately 2000 to 13,296 workers—well over half the union's membership of 25,000. Ships held up now number 127, or 15 more than yesterday.

In addition, transport workers at the Smithfield meat market, London's largest, voted to strike if an attempt is made to bring in meat that has been moved by troops, which have been unloading food ships.

A committee of five has been appointed to administer the extraordinary powers granted under the state of emergency. So far they have used none of the powers, except to assign a few troops to loading military stores. It has been reported that 10,000 more servicemen are being made ready to take over jobs abandoned by dock workers.

The emergency measures must be approved by th House of Commons, and will come up for debate Wednesday. Passage is assured by a large majority.

At the docks the scene was placidity itself. There were no milling crowds and no spate of police. An extended tour revealed four pickets leaning against convenient walls and displaying placards. Troops were in evidence only where unloading was actually in progress.

The strike goes back to a war between two Canadian unions.

Ship With 60 Refugees Believed Sunk

Halifax, N. S., July 12 (U.P.).—A refugee official said today that he believed the tiny Swedish vessel Briljantin, en route to Canada with 60 political refugees, had sunk without trace in the Atlantic.

Ilmars Andrejsons, secretary of the Latvian Relief Association, said the tiny, overcrowded vessel left Sweden June 9 on a trip that normally would have taken two weeks.

Chinese Reds Claim Capture of Siangshan

Shanghai, July 12 (U.P.).—The Communist New China News Agency said today that Communist troops have captured Siangshan, 120 miles southeast of Hangchow. This placed the whole of Chekiang province, except for islands off the coast, in Communist hands.

Dulles Fights For Treaty in Maiden Speech

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), former U. N. delegate and GOP foreign relations adviser, yesterday clashed head-on with leading foes of the North Atlantic defense treaty in his first Senate speech.

This $64 question by Senator Robert Taft (R., Ohio) touched off the melee:

"Does the Senator regard a program of military aid as a vital corollary to the treaty?"

"No, I do not," replied Dulles, and the battle was on.

Again and again the same question in different form was fired at Dulles by Taft and other critics of the pact. Their growing opposition to the treaty is based largely on Taft's central contention that the pact "morally" obligates the United States to arm Europe.

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) finally pinned down the freshman New Yorker to a flat "No" answer on the latter point, but not until the Senate sat overtime to hear the fireworks.

Dulles argued that the United States is no more bound by the treaty to supply arms to France, for example, than France is to provide arms to us, but that all signatories are committed to work out together a mutual defense system for the North Atlantic area.

This need not necessarily mean the United States would send arms to any given country, he insisted.

Thus, he argued, the existence of the atom bomb in this country might be recommended by the joint defense council as the best possible defense of France, while France on her part, might provide a strategic base.

This answer did not satisfy Senators Taft, Arthur V. Watkins (R.,

Board Rejects Krug Proposal On Play Areas

By Chalmers M. Roberts

The District Recreation Board in a three-hour meeting yesterday refused, 4 to 2, to accept an Interior Department proposal to end the long-time differences between the two agencies over the city's play areas.

The board did agree, however, to consider the proposal further at a by-laws committee meeting tonight and again at another board meeting within a week.

At the same time the board received from Interior Secretary J. A. Krug a press release which appeared to indicate the swimming pool part of the controversy is as far from settlement as ever.

Krug declared his department has "never contemplated" that it turn over to the board any of its facilities "without complete assurance and a clear stipulation that all areas now operating on a non-

Truman Asks $4 Million for D. C. Back Pay

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to pay the retroactive $330 salary increases of District employes with a $4,205,850 appropriation.

The money would come from District revenues. It would cover the back pay for the fiscal year that ended June 30 authorized recently by Congress. The fund was included in a $194,514,857 list of supplemental appropriations forwarded to the Capitol.

The President also asked appropriation of $200,000 to pay $330 retroactive increases to Howard University employes, $28,100 to pay $330 retroactive increases to employes of the Columbia Institution for the Deaf, and $31,300 for the same increases in the current year to the Columbia Institution employes; $64,000 to cover the $330 increase for White House Police, and $12,400 to pay retroactive increases to Park Police.

The increase for White House and Park Police was provided directly by the District pay boost covering Metropolitan Police. The pay raises for Howard and Columbia Institution were keyed to the District pay boosts by a Federal Budget Bureau ruling, according to Federal Security officials. They said the Budget Bureau held up requests for appropriations to increase Howard and Columbia Institution salaries pending approval of the District pay boost.

Two other major District items were included in the President's appropriation request—$100,000 for the District's share in financing the Washington day-care center program through June 30, 1950; and $225,000 for Bell Vocational School improvements.

The Bell project, strongly urged by school officials, and approved earlier by the Senate, was deleted from the District appropriation bill at the request of House leaders who wanted a declaration from

Numbers Game Is Poor Man's Gamble; Operators' Take Is 46 to 55 Per Cent

By Ernest E. Blanche

(This is the fourth of seven condensed installments on Blanche's recent book on facts and fallacies about gambling. The author is Chief Statistician for the Logistics Division of the Army General Staff. As a hobby, he has studied gambling for 20 years. He's convinced—you can't win!—Editor's Note.)

INSTALLMENT FOUR

Playing the "numbers" is essentially the poor man's way of expressing his gambling instinct.

Since its participants may bet as little as a penny, it is especially popular among low-income workers and others of meager means.

Although the numbers racket is illegal in every State and city, you don't have to be a detective to find a place where you can place your bet—at the newsstand, the corner bar, the candy store, the gas station or the barber shop.

When you place your bet, you select any number from 000 to 999. The winning number is usually determined by the total mutuel prices of races at a metropolitan track.

[District numbers racketeers use the total mutuel figures of the first three races at a selected track. Only the number immediately preceding the decimal point in the total counts. Thus, if the totals for the first three races are $28.50, $35.70 and $20.00, the winning number would be the combination 8-5-0.—Editor's Note.]

You have only one chance in a thousand of picking the winning number and should receive $10 on a winning penny bet, but the bookie payoff ranges between 500 and 600 to 1. By and large, the operating ring gets 46 to 55 per cent of all the money wagered on the numbers.

The numbers game has become so popular it is believed some 10 million people participate in it.

Numbers runners who formerly waited on street corners and hung around pool rooms for their nickle and dime customers have become messengers, janitors and elevator operators in large organizations so they can contact players who are willing to wager several dollars a day.

"I've been in this numbers racket for 30 years," a runner

Probers Decide Not to Press Investigation of Hiss Trial

The House Un-American Activities Committee decided yesterday against reopening the Hiss-Chambers case "at this time."

But it left the way open for digging into it once more after Alger Hiss is tried again on perjury charges.

The committee said that it definitely will make no investigation of the way Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman handled the original Hiss trial in New York.

Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) put it into a statement:

"There will be no investigation of the Judiciary by the Committee on Un-American Activities, and none has been proposed or requested by any members thereof."

Two members of the committee, Representatives Nixon (R., Calif.) and Velde (R., Ill.), have demanded a congressional inquiry, accusing Kaufman of favoring the defense. They still can press for an investigation by the Judiciary Committee.

The two did propose yesterday that the Un-American Activities Committee now call in witnesses it had refrained from questioning because they might be brought into the Hiss trial.

On that, Wood said, other members felt that "the taking of testimony from persons who might be called in a future trial of such criminal prosecution, even if taken in executive session, might hinder the conduct of that trial."

Prichard Partner Takes Stand To Deny Forgery of Ballots

Lexington, Ky., July 12 (AP).—A. E. Funk, jr., today denied from the witness stand any part in the forging of ballots last fall in Bourbon County. A handwriting specialist was called to back up Funk's testimony in Federal Court.

The 27-year-old Lexington attorney, on trial with E. F. Prichard, jr., 34, his partner and former confidant of top-rank Washington officials, denied any connection with the ballot box stuffing of 254 bogus Democratic votes in the presidential balloting.

One ballot of the 254 was scratched against Senator Virgil Chapman, Bourbon County Democrat, for the Republican candidate, John Sherman Cooper.

Funk said he signed none of the ballots, had no knowledge of the forgeries until they were publicized, didn't know the names of the election officers and hadn't been in Bourbon County for several months before the election.

Bourbon County and Fayette (Lexington) County adjoin.

On the weekend when the Government said the ballots were forged and cast, Funk said he spent Friday in his office, helped his wife prepare to entertain friends Friday evening, spent Saturday morning at his office, was at home

Sparkman Offers New Housing Bill

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A housing bill which its sponsor, Senator John Sparkman (D., Ala.) predicts will offer a major spur to the construction of homes for the middle-income group, was introduced in the Senate yesterday.

Sparkman said his housing subcommittee of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee would shortly begin executive hearings to study the measure. Its provisions have been discussed at open hearings on the general question of housing.

The measure would extend Titles I, II, and VI of FHA legislation for 12 months; would provide for one billion dollars in direct loans to housing cooperatives and other nonprofit housing corporations; provide special loans to veterans, and authorize 40-year loans at 2½ per cent interest to educational institutions for building dormitories and other housing.

Also under the measure, certain States, municipalities and the District of Columbia would be given without cost, under certain conditions, public housing now Federally owned.

Under this provision the District of Columbia would become owner of three National Capital Housing Authority projects: Numbers 49012, 49017, and 49044.

The three permanent war housing projects which the National Capital Housing Authority has asked Congress to turn over for low-rental housing are Highland Dwellings, Stoddard Dwellings, and Twenty-First Street Houses. The request has been approved by the District Commissioners.

The Alexandria developments included in the bill are Cameron Valley, Chinquapin Village and 15 experimental units on Madison st. between Henry and Patrick sts.

Cameron Valley and Chinquapin are large temporary projects built during the war for military and civilian personnel at Fort Belvoir and the Navy Ordnance Plant in Alexandria.

One of the most important provisions of the bill from the standpoint of breaking the log-jam in the construction of low-priced homes is extension of the Government's guarantee of certain types of home loans through the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Loaded with many home building loans for veterans and others, banks have been unwilling to take on more such risks under a partial guarantee ohly. The Sparkman measure guarantees 95 per cent on loans for homes for the middle-income group, and 100 per cent on loans for certain types of veterans' construction.

Under this bill the Government would insure 95 per cent of loan for a single dwelling whose cost does not exceed $6650, except that such a dollar-amount limitation could be increased by $950 in the case of a three-bedroom house and by $1900 in the case of a four-bedroom house.

Thus a two-bedroom house could be initiated for a $350 down payment and amortized over 32 years at a cost roughly of $55 or $60 a month. A three-bedroom house would call for a $400 down payment and an amortization of $60 to $65 a month. A four-bedroom house would require a $450 down payment and an amortization of $65 to $70 a month.

75-Cent Minimum Wage Bill Next on Senate's 'Must' List

The Administration's minimum wage bill, one of the 11 points in the President's mid-year economic report, yesterday was scheduled for Senate action immediately following ratification of the North Atlantic Pact.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) announced the decision following a meeting of the Senate Democratic policy committee.

Providing for an increase in wage minimums from 40 to 75 cents an hour, but stripped of highly controversial increased coverage features, the measure will displace the reciprocal trade extension bill as next on the Senate's "must" list.

In Time for Action

Lucas indicated the decision was influenced by the leadership's desire to get the wage measure messaged to the House in plenty of time for final action this session.

He pointed out that the House already has passed the reciprocal trade measure but neither house has acted on the wage measure.

Trade legislation will follow the wage bill on the Senate floor, but Lucas declined to discuss the Senate program beyond that date. Asked about adjournment, he said: "It still looks a long way off."

Three Days Allotted

Lucas predicted the Senate will dispose of the wage legislation in about three days. Plans call for laying it aside temporarily, however, as the final big money bills reach the floor. If the expected economy row breaks around these, all bets may be off.

The Democratic leader said the party policy group discussed the proposed McClellan resolution, calling on President Truman to make 5 to 10 per cent cuts below budget in 1950 appropriations, but decided it was "premature" until Congress has passed on the last big money bills. Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) had threatened to move independently to call up his resolution if the policy group turned him down.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.), accompanied by five Democratic Senators, appeared before the committee to urge action this session on Lodge's proposed electoral reforms, including his proposed constitutional amendment t abolish the electoral college. Appearing with Lodge were Senators Clyde R. Hoey (N. C.), Frank P. Graham (N. C.), Estes Kefauver (Tenn.), J. William Fulbright (Ark.), and Matthew Neely (W. Va.). Lucas said the committee reached no decision on the Lodge proposals.

Truman, Pace Confer on Broadcast Tonight; Spence Sees President, Offers Point IV Bill

By The Associated Press

President Truman talked business with Budget Director Frank Pace yesterday as he polished up the radio message he scheduled for tonight (10:30 p. m. EDT) to explain the new economic course he has charted for the Nation.

Pace kept mum on the subject of their conference, but another White House caller, Representativ Spence (D., Ky.) moved quickly to put some presidential words into action shortly after talking with Mr. Truman.

Spence, chairman of the House Banking Committee, introduced a bill to carry out the Administration plan to help develop backward areas of the world with private American capital which the Government would guarantee against risks "peculiar" to such investments.

The global investment program was a major item in the special beat-the-recession message the President sent to Congress Monday. He stressed anew the theme that the flow of such capital to under-developed regions would be a spur to business at home as well as opening up new trade areas throughout the world.

Spence's measure would amend the Export-Import Bank Act to provide authority for the risk guarantees.

The lawmakers indicated they may give the slow signal to other phases of the economic program the President outlined Monday in a major reversal of the direction of Administration financial policies. While they generally cheered his retreat on the income tax front, key leaders predicted there would be no early action to lift excise levies on transportation as he requested.

Experts of 7 States Discount 'Scare Talk'

Louisville, Ky., July 12 (AP).—A group of men primarily interested in whether there are enough jobs to go around agreed here today there is little cause for alarm.

Spokesmen for seven States were represented at a two-region conference of employment security agencies. Unemployment compensation officials from Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Kentucky were present.

The delegates weighed the economic situation of their respective States. One or two, representing highly industrialized States, were gloomy about some aspects of the future, but they joined the others in discounting "scare talk"—at least for the present.

Mark Frische, assistant to Vego Barnes, Kentucky State commissioner of economic security, said: "Kentucky's economy is far more robust now than it was before the war. The number of persons employed in the State has increased 55 per cent over 10 years ago. And manufacturing has increased 83 per cent in the same period.

"Unemployment is on the increase, but it has largely been confined to the mining industry."

Other spokesmen's views.

Indiana—Clayton J. Martz, Unemployment Claims Administrator: The outlook is not alarming but we are dubious about the future of the steel and automobile industries. Unemployment claims have increased 100 per cent. Several cities have been hit hard by cutbacks in production, particularly Fort Wayne and Richmond. But southern Indiana's mining industry has held up well and so has construction.

Michigan—James W. Jones, Chief of Research and Planning in Employment Security Administration: Employment in Michigan is only 4 per cent below the peacetime peak reached last December, but certain areas hav ben particularly hard hit. In Muskegon, one out of four workers are unemployed while 13 per cent of available workers in Port Huron are out of jobs. All copper mining has ceased in Michigan because of high production costs.

Illinois—Mrs. Elizabeth Slotkin, chief of Research and Planning for Employment Security Agency: Unemployment compensation claims have increased 85 per cent but as the State's factories exhaust their present inventories production will increase again and the jobless will go back to work. The outlook is not particularly rosy, but is not alarming either.

Wisconsin Outlook

Wisconsin.—A. T. Rose, Economic Security Official: Although manufacturing employment and the number of man hours has decreased, the average hourly wage has remained at $1.41. The outlook in, general is not alarming, but it is dubious in some fields.

Ohio—William Papier, Research and Statistics Division of Security Administration: The State's steel industry is still strong and so is its automobile and car parts manufacturing. The backlog of construction is even greater than a year ago.

Minnesota—Ray Solem, chief of Research and Statistics of the Security Administration: Outlook not alarming, especially if the movement toward decentralization of industry is resumed. Before the war halted the movement, Minnesota's industrial potential was increasing rapidly.

SPEAKING OF Furniture
By CLIFFORD POWELL

DECORATING THE BEDROOM

Make your bedroom something to be proud of. The trend today, due to smaller bedrooms, leans toward the modern functional, space-saving furniture . . . But wait, don't let that keep you from using the furniture you have, or from "period" pieces if you like them.

As in all decorating, it's what YOU like that counts.

Let's take the case of the bedroom illustrated above. The room was small to begin with. But this has been overcome, to all appearances, by making the twin beds into one by using a slipcover over the headboard, and placing the Mr. and Mrs. chests side by side between the two windows. A small vanity with lamps fills in the other wall.

If the ceiling seems too low, try drapes with a vertical design without the valance. Use bedspreads in harmony with the color scheme and you have a room that's cozy and "sleepable" . . . one you'll like to show your friends.

Just keep these two things in mind . . . it's taste, not money, that counts. And stock to scale. Don't try to make the small bedroom hold too much.

You'll probably find many suitable pieces of furniture in our store to round out the picture. If we can help in any other way let us know.

U. S. Convoy to Test Red Berlin Curbs

By Marguerite Higgins

Berlin, July 12 (NYHT).—The U. S. Army today dispatched an unarmed convoy of 60 trucks toward Berlin as the Soviets continued to stall on demands that they lift new curbs on truck traffic into the city.

Lieut. Gen. G. P. Hays, deputy military governor, said the American convoy, carrying supplies to Berlin's military post, would be part of a regular weekly training trip for the quartermaster corps.

Russian handling of the American convoy, which will reach the border Wednesday night, will test whether large Allied road shipments will receive the same slowdown treatment accorded to German civilian traffic. So far, individual Allied vehicles have encountered no difficulties.

The restrictions have cut German vehicles going through the Helmstedt check point to four an hour.

On two occasions today the Soviets evaded western demands the restrictions be lifted. In a written reply to a British protest, a Soviet official declared his headquarters knew nothing of any slowdown of traffic at the Helmstedt crossing point." He excused the shutdown of all other check points except at Helmstedt on the grounds that this was in line with four-power agreements. Western Allies promptly denied this.

The restrictions were brought up today as point No. 1 at the first meeting of the four Allied commandants held here to implement the Paris agreement to "normalize the life of the city."

Gen. Alexander Kotikov, the Soviet commandant, refused an American proposal calling for immediate removal of hindrances to truck traffic. He said the western complaint would be passed on to his superiors.

At today's meeting the commandants parried ideas and skirted the major issues. As Brig. Gen. Frank Howley, American commandant, described it later, "we all did our best to outsmile each other."

Finally the Russians accepted three written proposals put forward by the British as the basis for the next meeting.

The proposals include: Recognition by the east and west halves of Berlin of the validity of each other's postage stamp, direct route passage to the western sectors of mail trains coming from west Germany and end of Soviet interference with west Berlin mail, and abolition of the requirement that west sector vehicles must obtain Soviet passes before entering the Soviet zones.

'Unable'

CIO Worker Won't Tell Status as Red

By the United Press

Elizabeth Sasuly, representative of two left-wing CIO unions, yesterday said she was "unable"—to tell the House Committee on Un-American Activities whether she is a Communist.

Miss Sasuly, Washington representative of the Food and Tobacco Workers and the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Unions, declined to answer on grounds she might incriminate herself.

But she introduced a variation to the stock answer of a long series of witnesses who have refused to answer committee questions. Most have started out by saying: "I refuse to answer because . . ."

But to each committee question, Miss Sasuly replied: "I am unable to answer this question because . . ."

She said she did not regard her failure to answer "as an action that is contemptuous toward this committee and therefore I am not 'refusing.'"

She refused to say "I refuse" despite a lengthy wrangle with Committee Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.).

Among other things, Miss Sasuly was "unable" to say whether she knew Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the United States Communist Party; William Z. Foster, national party chairman, or fugitive Gerhart Eisler, international Communist leader who recently fled this country.

Miss Sasuly was called in connection with the committee's investigation of communism in Washington.

Russians Win Treaty Point

London, July 12 (AP).—Big Four deputies, drafting Austria's treaty of independence, agreed today that Russia can take profits from Soviet business back to Moscow in either oil or cash.

The agreement ended a lengthy discussion of the exact wordage of a treaty clause dealing with Soviet business firms in Austria after that country become independent.

The businesses include oil refining and Danube River shipping.

The deputy foreign ministers of the United States, France and Britain today agreed to the Russian proposal that net profits on Soviet oil enterprises, after payment of Austrian taxes, can be taken to Russia either in the form of oil exports or convertible cash.

The same principle was agreed on rents of Russian-held business properties.

Burma Town Retaken

Rangoon, Burma, July 12 (AP).—Government troops have recaptured Myingyan, important rail town 390 miles north of Rangoon, the army announced today.

Bishops Spies, Czech Asserts

Prague, Czechoslovakia, July 12 (AP).—A Czechoslovak official today accused Roman Catholic bishops of spying for "unfriendly foreign powers." He demanded that they face the death penalty, the same as soldiers guilty of spying.

The official was Prof. Alexander Horak, a priest suspended by the hierarchy, who has gone over to the government side of the church-state fight. He is commissioner of transport in Slovakia.

Horak, in an address to the Bratislava army garrison, charged that the church leaders had given advance information on the church's case to the Voice of America broadcast.

The Rodenbergs were married Saturday in Alexandria, Va.

Mob Stones Nehru's Car In Calcutta

Calcutta, India, July 12 (U.P.).—At least 20 persons were injured and 22 arrested in a clash with police today after Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's open car was stoned as he drove into Calcutta from the airport.

Nehru arrived here to study the deteriorating political situation in West Bengal province.

Nehru was given an enthusiastic welcome at the airport but along the route into the city stones were hurled at his car at several points and there were cries of "Go back, Nehru, go back, you are not wanted here."

The crowd at the airport had braved a monsoon to greet him as he arrived for a three-day visit to enquire into the tangled affairs of the All-India Party's provincial committee here and to try to straighten out differences among dissenting groups within that body.

The disunity was said to be the chief cause of anti-Congress sentiment among the people of this frontier province.

Strong precautionary measures were being taken by the police to safeguard Nehru, especially during an open-air address on Thursday night.

The Communist party has launched a poster campaign calling for a general strike on Thursday and asking the populace to boycott the Nehru meeting.

Chinese Reds Order All-Out Flood Fight

Shanghai, July 12 (U.P.).—The rain-swollen Yangtze and Yellow rivers burst their banks in a score of places today, inundating rice and cotton fields and leaving at least 50,000 people homeless.

The Communist East China bureau ordered "total mobilization" of military and civilian manpower to fight the flood which it said threatened to be the worst since 1931 when 13 provinces were devastated.

The hardest hit areas were in Honan, Anwhei, and Kiangsi provinces. In addition to the two great rivers themselves, many of their tributaries and adjacent lakes overflowed, flooding villages and farmlands.

$150,000,000 Voted Korea

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday voted to give the anti-Communist Korean republic 150 million dollars to aid in its reconstruction and economic development.

It approved a bill authorizing the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to advance immediately fifty million dollars to get the program under way. This sum would be returned to the RFC once Congress appropriates the 150 million dollars.

Later in the day President Truman sent to Congress a request for 125 million dollars to aid Korea.

Under the program, to be handled by the Economic Cooperation Administration, not more than 10 merchant vessels could be made available to Korea for operation in eastern Asiatic waters until June 30, 1951.

The Korean republic controls the southern half of Korea. Russian troops recently evacuated the northern part, but the committee was told that a strong Communist police force still is in control of that sector.

Committee Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) said Senate floor action would await a House vote on a similar bill.

British Dollar Crisis Parley Opens Today

London, July 12 (NYHT).—Finance ministers of Britain, eight nations of the British Commonwealth and Northern Ireland will meet here Wednesday to begin drafting concerted plans for meeting the dollar crisis of Britain and the sterling area.

The conference, which is expected to last 10 days or two weeks, is the second major step in efforts to solve the dollar shortage.

The first step was the meeting last week of Sir Stafford Cripps, British Chancellor of the Exchequer; John W. Snyder, U. S. Secretary of the Treasury, and Douglas C. Abbott, Canadian finance minister. The tripartite talks, however, apparently failed to produce results.

Sir Stafford will outline to the commonwealth conference the short-term economies planned by the government. He may announce some of these economies to the House of Commons on Thursday or Monday when the dollar crisis will be debated.

Indications are that any decisions reached by the finance ministers probably will not take effect until the next meeting of Sir Stafford, Snyder and Abbott at Washington either late next month or early in September.

Besides Sir Stafford and Abbott, the finance ministers are J. J. Dedman, Australia; Walter Nash, New Zealand; N. C. Havenga, South Africa; Dr. John Matthai, India; Ghulam Mohammad, Pakistan; J. R. Jayawardena, Ceylon; E. C. F. Whitehead, Southern Rhodesia, and J. M. Sinclair, Northern Ireland.

Pole Convicted On Spy Charge

Manchester, England, July 12 (AP). A British court convicted a former Polish artillery officer today of spying on the British and United States Air Forces for a foreign power and sentenced him to three years in prison.

The prisoner, Marien Kaczmarek, 40, did not take the witness stand. No defense witnesses were called to testify.

However, after Justice Fred E. Pritchard pronounced sentence, Kaczmarek told the jury of 10 men and two women "Your verdict is based on an injustice." He denounced a fellow Pole, Zygmunt Balusz, who reported him to police last February 27 and testified for the prosecution.

Kaczmarek was accused specifically in the eight-count indictment of obtaining information which might be "useful, directly or indirectly, to an enemy."

16-Day Australian Coal Strike, Laid to Reds By Labor Minister; 700,000 Out of Work

Sydney, Australia, July 12 (U.P.). Australian Labor Minister Edward Holloway said today a paralyzing 16-day-old coal strike in Australia was "cooked up in Moscow" in an attempt by Russia to impose its tyranny on the world.

Holloway's statement came as the Labor government was reported to be preparing sedition or conspiracy charges against the Communist Party for fomenting the strike. The strike has thrown 700,000 people out of work and threatens a complete shutdown of gas supplies.

Holloway said the army and navy might be used to prevent dislocation of essential services.

Herbert Evatt, attorney general, claimed the Communist leaders and press were "mimicking Mussolini."

The miners refuse to negotiate until their leaders, jailed for contempt of court, are released, and fines levied against the unions for illegally withdrawing strike funds are rescinded.

Earlier today Australian security police raided the printing plant of the Communist newspaper Tribune in search of documentary evidence linking the party with a deliberate effort to hamper the Nation's economy.

Australians see little hope of an immediate settlement. The miners, 23,000 strong, seek a 35-hour week instead of the present 40-hour week, a $4.84 a week wage raise, and long service leave amounting to an extra paid vacation after so many years' work.

D. C. Board Rescinds Dr. Mensh Appointment

Commissioners yesterday rescinded the appointment of Dr. William D. Claudy to the District Board of Police and Fire Surgeons when it was learned that Dr. Claudy could not meet the two-year residence requirement. He resides in Arlington County.

Instead, the city heads appointed Dr. Maurice Mensh, 1730 I st. nw., on the recommendation of Dr. John A. Reed, chairman of the board. Dr. Mensh served an interim appointment on the board during World War II.

Kenney Made Head Of ECA in Britain

W. John Kenney, former Undersecretary of the Navy, yesterday was appointed chief of the Marshall Plan mission to Britain.

Kenney

Kenney was sworn in at once. He plans to leave Friday for the new post, but may delay his departure to accompany Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman. Hoffman will not start, he told reporters, until the ECA appropriation is approved by Congress.

Kenney, 45, succeeds Thomas K. Finletter, who resigned recently.

"The British situation is in no sense a hopeless one, I am sure," Kenney told reporters after the oath-taking.

"I have great admiration for the fortitude and strength of character of the British people. A people who stood as they did at Dunkirk won't let a minor crisis like this get them down."

Kenney declined to discuss Britain's dollar shortage further.

Kenney submitted his Navy resignation at the height of the controversy over the super-carrier program. He left in May, when John L. Sullivan quit as Secretary.

A graduate of Stanford and Harvard Universities, Kenney formerly practiced law in San Francisco and Los Angeles.

They have three children and five grandchildren, all present at the reception. Wilson is president of the American Beam Tester Co., and is a former member of the engineering staff of the FWA

'Still on Job,' Hoffman Says

Paul G. Hoffman said yesterday a proposed 750-million-dollar slash in foreign aid funds would mean "taking a chance" with the European recovery program. When asked if he planned to quit as chief of the Economic Cooperation Administration, he replied:

"I'm still on the job."

Hoffman previously had said that if the fund were cut below the figure he considered necessary to do the job, he would quit and let somebody else try it.

The multi-million-dollar reduction in spending for the Marshall Plan and other foreign aid was recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee, which ignored President Truman's admonition that a cut would be "economic folly."

Hoffman reminded newsmen that the Appropriations Committee's action still has to go before the whole Senate and to a conference with the House before the final figure is determined.

He indicated he expects a fight on the Senate floor to restore the money.

Dulles Makes Fighting Debut

Utah), Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) and other critics of the pact, who went after the New Yorker hammer and tongs on the arms theme.

Dulles, who came to the Senate only last week, and apologized to colleagues for speaking while "still wrapped in Senatorial swaddling clothes," appeared unruffled by the sharp crackle of questions.

Argues for Pact, ECA

Strolling back and forth in the "well" of the recently occupied old Supreme Court chamber, Dulles warned the Senate that neither the treaty nor the Marshall Plan can now be abandoned without "consequences of the gravest character."

"It (abandoning the treaty) would at once revive the Communist offensive against western Europe," he said. 'It would lead our European friends to feel that we could not be relied upon to sustain our high purpose.

"It would make it utterly impossible to go on from here, as I hope we shall, to develop a program to save Asia from being over-run by Soviet communism. It would, indeed, scrap our program just at the moment when its soundness had been demonstrated but before it had been sustained to consolidate the peace."

Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wisc.), who lined up on Dulles' side, drew an even graver response when he asked what would happen if the Senate failed to ratify.

Slowly phrasing his reply, Dulles said: "If the impression became prevalent that this country was turning its back on international cooperation, the consequences would be disastrous . . .

"Other free countries of the world would almost certainly fall. We would be encircled and, eventually, strangled ourselves."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) hopped into the debate on Dulles' side after Taft sharply challenged the New Yorker's argument that we are not committed to supply arms.

No Lone Defense By U. S.

Vandenberg said the language of the treaty was clearly designed "to create a mutual responsibility for a common net result" rather than commit the United States alone to defend the North Atlantic area.

Like Dulles, he argued it would be "most unfortunate to dilute that responsibility" by adopting a Senate reservation denying any arms commitment.

Taft had asked Dulles "what possible objection can there be" to a reservation saying we are not obligated to supply arms.

Dulles said it would amount to rewriting of the treaty by the Senate, and resubmission to the various Governments involved. He said this shouldn't be attempted at this late stage without "an impelling reason."

Dulles Reassures Taft

Taft observed that unless the Senate reserved the point, the signatory governments would feel they had been "fooled" when they came here after arms.

Dulles said he had talked in Paris with heads of some of the signatory nations.

"My definite impression was that they did not consider getting arms from us is dependent on the treaty," he said.

Taft asked if it wasn't a fact that an arms program "implementing" the treaty has already been worked out and is ready for submission to the Senate.

"No," said Dulles, "I do not so understand it. The ($1,450,000,000 arms) plan has been worked out on it sown merits."

Will Use Own Judgment

"Will the Senator vote for the arms plan?" asked Taft.

"I don't know what the program is," replied Dulles. "I shall certainly exercise my independent judgment."

Taft quoted from a State Department paper describing the arms program as "a very vital corollary to the pact," and asked if Dulles agreed. Dulles first said he did not know what the department meant by "corollary." Taft insisted on a direct answer and Dulles said flatly he did not agree with the department.

At one point Taft reddened and shouted: "Can't we look at realities? Must we draw these fine distinctions?"

Much of Dulles' earlier speech seemed to be direct rebuttal of Taft's Monday attack on the program. Taft had charged the treaty would lead to an arms-for-Europe program that it might be impossible to finance.

"Certainly, we give no other nation or group of nations a blank check on the United States," Dulles told the Senate. "That, it seems to me, is a preposterous interpretation of the treaty."

The former United States delegate to the Paris conference disclosed that some memebrs of our delegation discussed fears "that any relaxation of East-West tension would bring a corresponding relaxation on the part of the American people and that they should be kept artificially alarmed."

"That thesis we rejected," he said.

State Department Says Chinese Reds Beat Up Consul

The State Department said yesterday that Shanghai police, backed by armed Chinese Communist soldiers, tried to get United States Consul William M. Olive to sign a denunciation of the American Government while he was held on a charge of violating traffic laws.

Olive was forced by brutal beatings to sign the "confession" and "apology" which was published last week in Shanghai, the Department said.

The consul was released on Saturday after having been held on a bread and water diet for nearly three days.

Olive, 32, a native of Ironton, Mo., has been under medical care since his release.

Auto Union Returns Reuther, 3 Others

Milwaukee, Wisc., July 12 (AP).—Walter Reuther was elected today to his third term as president of the CIO United Auto Workers.

The union's other three top officers were swept back in at the same time at the UAW convention.

Reuther's reelection, a foregone conclusion, became positive when he received a majority of the 2400 delegates' 8780 votes.

Opposing the veteran red-haired chieftain was W. G. Grant, former head of the big Ford Local 600 at Detroit. Grant was the nominee of the left-wing Progressive Unity Caucus.

A third nominee, Claude E. Bland of Hudson Local 154, Detroit, refused to run.

Prosecution Asked

Gas Light Co. Accused as Law Violator

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West was asked yesterday to prosecute the Washington Gas Light Co. on the grounds it is engaging in the plumbing business in violation of District law.

The request was made by an association, the Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers of the metropolitan area.

West said he hasn't had time to study the matter. The Gas Light Co. said it had no comment now.

In announcing the request for prosecution, George C. Webster, chairman of the independents, said:

"In our opinion, the action of the Gas Light Co. in contracting to install gas water heaters, in attaching them to the water systems by its employes who are not licensed plumbers, and in neglecting to obtain a license to do so, is conclusive evidence of guilt which should be prosecuted in their case as readily as if it were some poor unlicensed mechanic who tampered with public safety by engaging in plumbing."

The independents also charged that the Gas Light Co., by selling and installing gas appliances, is also guilty of unfair trade practice and unjust competition.

Webster said the company is "engaged in a major, subsidized campaign in the merchandising of appliances in competition with many independent merchants in the field."

William A. Roberts, formerly People's Counsel of the District, is counsel for the independents. The complaint filed with West by Roberts, the announcement of the independents said, cited 202 names and addresses obtained from the official public records of the District, and covered permits obtained by the Gas Light Co. in April, May and June.

Truman Steel Plea Refused

dustry would have grave consequences, and would interfere with the attainment of our national objectives."

Therefore, "in view of these circumstances," the President requested the parties to the dispute to continue work and operations under their present agreement for 60 days. Meanwhile, Mr. Truman said, he intends to appoint a board of three public members to investigate and inquire into the issues, and to report within 45 days of July 16 "with their recommendations . . . as to fair and equitable terms of settlement."

The recommendations of the fact-finding board would not be binding on the union or the companies, but would have the effect of informing the public of the facts and thereby focusing public opinion on a settlement.

Big Steel has declared through its spokesmen that with business declining, the industry is in no shape to meet the steelworkers' demands, particularly in the matter of pensions. The union, on the other hand, insists that the industry can easily meet the demands, and yesterday backed up its opinion with an economic report prepared for the steelworkers by Bob Nathan, Washington economist.

Nathan's Contention

Nathan said that the steel industry could increase wages 20 cents per hour under June's cost and price conditions if operations were held at 90 per cent of capacity, and still realize the same "phenomenal" profits earned in the first quarter of 1949.

Under the same June conditions, industry could pay 10 cents more per hour, according to Nathan, at 80 per cent of operating capacity, and earn the same profits as in 1948, which he said amounted to 12.1 per cent of investment.

Industry could pay 20 cents per hour more wages and still earn wartime profits even at only 70 per cent of capacity operations, according to Nathan. He charged that the level of profits in the steel industry was so high as of June, 1949, that "substantial wage increases would make only a minor dent in the profit structure of the steel industry and the U. S. Steel Corporation."

Steel industry profits have risen from 3.4 per cent on its investment of 1939 to 15.4 per cent profits on its investment for the first quarter of 1949.

Slum Cleanup Project Delayed by Storm

The District Commissioners yesterday postponed the opening of "Operation Rehabilitation" until Tuesday at noon because of yesterday's rain.

The city heads, accompanied by a group of local government officials, were scheduled to tour the block bounded by 8th, 9th, and V sts. and Barry pl. nw. as the first step in a campaign to improve conditions in the area.

Governor Asks Hawaii Legislature to Settle Strike

Honolulu, July 12 (U.P.).—Territorial Governor Ingram Stainback announced today he will call a special session of the Hawaiian Legislature as soon as majority leaders can agree on a program to deal with the 73-day-old dock strike.

Stainback returned from the mainland this morning and promptly called a huddle with legislative leaders. He told them Washington expects the territory to "help itself" and that the Legislature must exhaust all its powers before it can expect Federal intervention.

The stevedoring companies named James P. Blaisdell, Honolulu attorney and former president of the Hawaii Employers' Council, to represent them before the Senate Labor Committee. Blaisdell presented the employers' case before the Governor's fact-finding panel last month.

Meanwhile, the Hawaiian Citizens' Committee moved to bolster dwindling food supplies by filing an admiralty suit against the $746,000 cargo aboard the Matson ship Hawaiian Farmer, labeled "hot" by the striking CIO longshoremen because it sailed for Honolulu three days after the strike began May 1.

Similar actions have brought grants from Federal Court that enabled unloading of the cargoes of other ships tied up by the walkout.

The committee acted as trustee for the consignees in the action before Federal Judge Frank McLaughlin. The Hawaiian Farmer's cargo includes $126,000 worth of refrigerated cargo, $250,000 in perishables and $370,000 in general cargo.

Hawaiian businessmen and unionists watched with interest the formation of a new corporation, Hawaii Stevedores, Ltd., formed by a group of Honolulu businessmen for the announced purpose of "re-establishing a normal flow of commerce." Officers include Samuel Wilder King, former Delegate to Congress and acting chairman of the Statehood Commission.

At the same time, the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union threatened to refuse to unload relief ships operated by Matson Navigation Co.

Sales Tax Rules Sent to Printers

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Comprehensive regulations covering operation of the District's 2 per cent sales tax starting August 1 were approved by the Commissioners yesterday and sent to the printers.

The initial print order is 30,000 and copies are expected to be available in 10 days, according to Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke.

The tax calls for a 1-cent levy on retail sales of 14 to 63 cents, 2 cents on those from 64 cents to $1.13, and a levy of 1 cent on each additional 50 cents or fraction thereof. Sales of 1 to 13 cents are exempt.

In formulating the 32 pages of regulations, Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent and Brooke met with representatives of more than 15 dealer organizations.

Under the law, all retailers are required to obtain free certificates of registry and to make monthly returns on the tax by the 20th of each month. An annual report is also required.

The principal exemptions from the tax are sales to governmental units, semipublic institutions holding exemption certificates; meal checks on which the total is less than $1.25; gasoline; livestock, poultry, seeds, feeds and other items used for agricultural purposes; medicines and drugs; crutches and wheelchairs; cigarettes, and food bought for off-premises consumption.

The regulations cover many individual business problems. Some of these are:

Contract sales—Written contracts for delivery of goods entered into before May 27, 1949, are exempt from tax. On items where title or possession, or both, is transferred between May 26 and August 1, the sale is exempt, too.

Sales combining services with materials—Professional, insurance or personal service transactions in which the materials used is less than 10 per cent of the total charge are exempt.

Hotel rooms—Persons charged a daily rate are deemed to be transients and their bills are exempt from tax.

Construction, repair or alteration of real property—Materials used in these, whether property is to be sold or resold, are taxable. Work for governmental agencies or semipublic institutions is exempt.

Installment sales—Retailers may remit the tax due on the total of the sales prices made during each month or they may remit the proportionate share of the tax covering the installments paid during each month, depending on which way they collect the tax from the purchasers.

Variety and department store sales—the tax shall apply to the total sales price without regard to the value of each taxable item provided the purchases are all made on the same day. The use by vendors of memorandum sales tax slips to accomplish this purpose is approved.

Printing—printing charges for materials, labor and plates are taxable. Charges of stamps, art work, addressing and mailing are exempt if separately stated on bills.

Florists—Sales of flowers, wreaths, bouquets, shrubbery and potted plants are taxable. Telegraph orders placed elsewhere for delivery in the District are exempt.

Laundries and cleaners—Exempt from tax for their services.

Storage warehousemen and furniture movers—Exempt except for tax on commodities used in carrying on their business.

Fuel oil—Subject to tax when sold for purposes other than resale or for use in manufacturing, assembling, processing or refining.

Newspapers and magazines—Newspapers are exempt, while magazines, other than those published by the Government, are not.

Motor vehicles and accessories—Exempt from tax.

Auctioneers—Sales subject to tax.

the Commissioners on it. The budget request, prepared by the District Commissioners, now gives their indorsement to the project. The money would permit enlarging the best of the two buildings now used for the Bell Vocational School, and abandoning the older building.

District officials pointed out that the $100,000 day-care center fund is to be enlarged by the fees paid by parents, now expecting to total $48,703 for the current fiscal year.

Some District debts for previous years were included in the requests—$122,186.73 for District payments to the United States Courts here for the 1948 fiscal year; $103,065.95 for District payments to private hospitals for care of indigent patients in the 1948 fiscal year; $23,266.95 for St. Elizabeths Hospital services to District patients in the 1948 fiscal year; $41,116.66 for erroneous tax collections, and $32,700 for heating and lighting District buildings in the last fiscal year, and $4750.17 for claims.

Other municipal items for use next year include $12,000 for repairing the fire-damaged roof of the city market building at 12th and Maine ave. nw.; $5000 for expenses of the License Bureau in administering the new city cigarette tax law; reallocation funds of $3474 for the Library, and $3125 for the Parole Board and $19,500 for the Department of Vehicles and Traffic to put into effect a new system of listing assessed valuation of automobiles on the motor vehicle registration cards.

Besides the new additions to the District budget covered by the President's requests, District officials pointed out that city expenses would later be swelled by about five million dollars, the amount needed to cover the $330 pay raises during the current year for city employes. This appropriation is to be asked early next year.

The budget so far approved in the 1950 District appropriation bill for the year ending next June 30 totals $102,754,447.

Other major items asked by the President included 124 million dollars for assistance to Korea, $30,800,000 for the State Department, and $24,400,000 for the Public Buildings Administration.

A one-million-dollar fund was asked for management and administrative improvements to follow up the work of the Hoover Commission.

District Commissioners yesterday approved a 10-page set of regulations governing the city's cigarette tax which goes into effect August 1.

The city heads set the license fee for retailers at $2 a year, for wholesalers at $10, and put a one-dollar fee on each vending machine.

The regulations prohibit sale of loose cigarettes and impose the penny-a-pack tax on all cigarettes distributed as prizes or samples, in addition to all sold across the counter or from machines.

Numbers Men Take a Huge Cut

explained to me. "I used to write numbers on the street, hoping to get enough nickle and dime players to earn myself $10 or $15 a day. Every couple of months the cops would run me in.

"But now I have an easy job in a hotel where there are customers all around me. Instead of writing nickle and dime bets, I am dealing in half-dollar and dollar bets and making $50 to $75 a day."

According to a recent article in Collier's by Albert Q. Maisel, a Ford Co. investigation revealed that a numbers ring in one of its plants grossed more than 5 million dollars a year. And this ring was only one of five operating among Ford employes!

It happens occasionally that there is a heavy play on a number that continues to recur as a winner. When this sort of thing takes place, the operators find it very convenient to leave town for greener pastures.

The "policy game" is a slight variation of the numbers racket in which the winning number is determined on the basis of the United States Treasury balance or some other unpredictable figure. Its operators also take in from 46 to 55 per cent of all the money wagered.

Running a numbers game calls for a surprising degree of ingenuity since there are continual brushes with the law.

As a result of police pressure, some numbers operators have devised a new system of distribution and collection. Formerly, one man made the distribution, picked up the numbers slips and collected the money.

Each Man Works Alone

Under the new scheme, designed to prevent police from wrecking the game, one man distributes the numbers books, another picks up the money, and a third assembles the slips being played. Since each man works alone, the operators of the game can continue even after a single arrest.

Numbers runners earn from 10 to 20 per cent of their total cash pickup and 10 per cent of any winnings by their customers.

A cab driver charged with picking up numbers slips stated that he had made more money in eight months as a numbers runner than in 15 years of legitimate hacking.

In addition to gamblers and runners who profit directly from the numbers game, there are other parasites—numerologists, astrologists, and phonies in general—who sell books, ranging from 25 cents to $5 telling how to pick or "dream" a winning number.

Numbers players waste a good deal of time trying to forecast the number according to such systems. Other players try to decipher the cartoon markings in certain newspapers.

All Systems Worthless

All of these schemes and systems are worthless, because there is no way to overcome the large percentage "take" of the numbers operators.

The lottery is almost as old as Christianity. The first commercial lotteries appeared in the early 1400s in Belgium, and Queen Elizabeth sponsored the first English lottery in 1569. Along with other European products, the lottery was imported into the American colonies.

Many civic, fraternal and religious organizations conducted lotteries for seemingly worthy purposes. Columbia University's predecessor, King's College, derived much of its original funds from a lottery. Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and other of our leading institutions of learning also benefited by this financing technique.

In the early 1800s, the lottery achieved considerable popularity. In 1932, according to the Boston Mercantile Journal, approximately 420 lotteries were drawn in eight States—New York, Virginia, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Delaware, North Carolina and Maryland. The total sum paid for tickets in these lotteries—66 million dollars—was five times the expenses of the Federal Government for that year.

Sharpers Gain Control

Gradually, sharpers and cheats began to control the lotteries. By 1834, the lottery was illegal in New York State. Other States followed the example. In 1890 Congress passed a law forbidding the distribution of lottery tickets and material through the mails. In 1895 it forbade interstate transportation of lottery tickets, and this virtually sounded the lottery's death knell in this country.

Present-day operators of lotteries in this country conduct their affairs surreptitiously, distributing their tickets through runners with shady pasts and questionable futures.

It isn't generally realized that most of the tickets for foreign lotteries being sold in the United States are counterfeit and that only a small percentage of the money which does find its way to the lottery sponsor goes back to the ticket holder in prizes.

Many thousands of Irish Sweepstakes tickets—usually priced at $2.50—are sold in this country each year. The prizes—ranging as high as $100,000 and $200,000—are based upon the results of a designated European horse race.

A great deal of fanfare follows announcement of the winners, but no one salutes the losers, of whom there are millions. The percentage of the total income actually paid to winners in the Irish Sweepstakes is a carefully-guarded secret, but those supposedly in the know believe it to be quite small.

Baseball Pool—$8990 Weekly

Then there is the baseball pool. The gambling ring conducting this lottery collects a total of $8990 each week (35,960 tickets at 25 cents each), out of which it pays a total of $3100 in prize money. The operators make a profit of $5890 each week—about 66 per cent of all the money wagered.

Another common lottery is the football pool conducted each Saturday when the college teams of the Nation compete on the gridiron.

Bettors select their choices of any number from 3 to 10 games. If a player picks three winning teams, he is paid at the rate of 4 to 1. However, the mathematical probability of selecting three winners is 1 chance in 8, assuming there are no ties.

If there is a tie game in the football lottery, the operator wins the wager by virtue of his own say-so.

You may think that the study of the past performances of each team would help you pick the winners. However, the operators of the lottery eliminate that possibility to a large degree by having a professional football handicapper rate the teams.

The "superior" team is handicapped by several or more points. Thus, one team is said to "spot" the other so many points. The handicap makes selection so difficult that about half the players select one team while the other half select the other team.

The football pool offers odds of 9 to 1 on four winners, but the real odds are 15 to 1, so he has a "take" of 37½ per cent.

For five winners the odds offered are 15 to 1 (real odds, 31 to 1; take, 50 per cent); for six winners, 29 to 1 (real odds, 63 to 1; take, 53 per cent); for seven winners, 39 to 1 (real odds, 127 to 1; take, 69 per cent); for eight winners, 74 to 1 (real odds 255 to 1; take, 71 per cent); for nine winners, 99 to 1 (real odds, 511 to 1; take, 80 per cent); for 10 winners, 199 to 1 (real odds, 1023 to 1; take, 80 per cent), and for 9 out of 10 winners, 29 to 1 (real odds, 101 to 1; take 71 per cent.

No attempt is made to indicate the operators' additional advantage in the event of ties since there is no way to determine their mathematical probability.

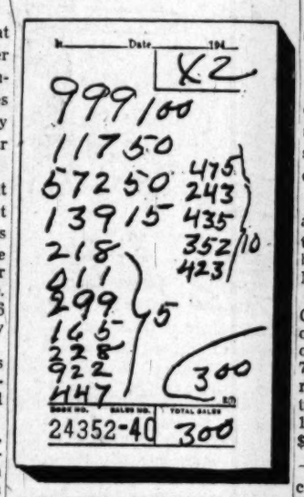
$3 of Play, But Not a Winner



NUMBERS SLIP—This is a reproduction of an original numbers slip picked up in a recent raid by Metropolitan police. It's similar to those seized yesterday and of all the numbers on it, none are winners, since the figure yesterday was 677. Note that a total play of $3 was collected by the agent on this slip: $1 on 999; 50 cents on 117; 50 cents on 572; 15 cents on 139; 5 cents on 218, 011, 299, 165, 228, 822 and 447; and 10 cents on 475, 243, 435, 352 and 423

Man Arrested As Bookie on Street Corner

William G. Sachlis, 50, of 1253 Morris st. ne., was arrested yesterday, at 13th st. and New York ave. nw., after vice squad detectives said they saw him accept a bet on a horse.

Booked at the First Precinct on a charge of setting up a gaming table, Sachiis was freed in $2000 bond pending his appearance in Municipal Court today.

Also to appear in Municipal Court today to answer charges of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips is James Kokinos, 74, of 1221 F st. ne., who was arrested yesterday by vice squad detectives in a variety store at 809 12th st. ne. He was released in $1500 bond.

3 Times and Out?

Early Date Again Snarls City Court

For the second time in two weeks, an early session at Municipal Court was snarled again yesterday.

It seems, that the judge, lawyers and parties can't get together at the same time.

On July 1, Judge Frank H. Myers arrived at 9 a. m. to greet an empty courtroom when he had scheduled at that time a group of preliminary motions involving eight defendants in a case of illegal whisky sales.

Judge Myers reprimanded the Corporation Counsel for not showing up until almost 10. Defense Attorney Curtis Mitchell also arrived late, but somewhat earlier than the prosecutor.

The judge set the case for yesterday at 9 a. m., but Monday afternoon informed Assistant Corporation Counsel Philip N. Brophy that the arguments would be postponed indifinitely.

Brophy's superior, Clark F. King, was unaware of this however. He arrived early and began to wonder whether Brophy might have forgotten.

"Out of an excess of caution," King said, "I went up to court and found the defendants and five police officers. But no judge."

King waited until 9:45 a. m. when a clerk advised him that the case was put over. King quickly scheduled the case for August 15—sometime after 10 a. m.

15th Alabama Mob Suspect Is Arrested

Birmingham, Ala., July 12 (U.P.).—Officers brought in a fifteenth flogging suspect today, but two others on the list of 17 indicted for participation in Alabama's wave of hooded terrorism were reported "out of the State."

It was said both men were expected back this weekend. Six of those charged have made bond, but nine others still were in jail late today. Burglary charges against six of them are not bailable.

Morris Called Again

A new grand jury, charged with cleaning up the mob violence investigation, called William Hugh Morris, Ku Klux Klan director, from his jail cell to testify.

Like the retiring grand jury which indicted the 17, the new investigating body had subpenaed Morris to furnish it with a list of the Klan membership in Jefferson County. When he refused the old jury's request, Circuit Judge Robert J. Wheeler jailed him.

Police Chief Arrested

Among those arrested yesterday were a suburban police chief, Elmer Brook of Brookside, and a former special county sheriff, Coleman (Brownie) Pollar.

Today, it was disclosed that two others caught in the round-up had law enforcement connections. James F. Shaffer, 48, of Brookside, was a part-time policeman, and assistant to Chief Brock, officers said.

Henry Nelson, 50, was reported to be a constable in the Flat Creek community.

Four special state officers have arrived in Birmingham to assist the new Jefferson County grand jury.

The prisoners showed no disposition to comply with the new demand to supply the Klan roster.

Court Fines McCarthy May Remain Lawyer

Madison, Wis., July 12 (U.P.).—The Wisconsin Supreme Court today dismissed charges of unethical conduct filed against Senator McCarthy (R., Wisc.) for failing to resign as a state circuit judge when he ran for the Senate in 1946.

The Wisconsin Board of Bar Commissioners had accused McCarthy of violating bar ethics in holding on to his judgeship. The State Supreme Court censured the Senator for an infraction of the moral code but said the complaint against him was not sufficient to warrant disbarment.

Corporal Held In Girl's Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS
Miss Noreen Corpl. Thompson

Military Police Corpl. Dallas H. Thompson, 24, was held on a charge of second degree manslaughter yesterday in East Nassau, N. Y., for the fatal shooting of Marion Anna Noreen, 25, of Brainard, N. Y. Corporal Thompson, who was guarding the wreckage of a jet fighter plane, told authorities his pistol went off accidentally when he stumbled while running toward the woods after hearing voices there. The girl, who was walking in the wooded area with her fiance, Walter Martin, 26, of East Nassau, and Martin's stepsister, Maude Shaw, 18, was shot in the neck.

Hearts Suspect Admits Killing Young Widow

New York, July 12 (AP).—The male member of an alleged lonely hearts killer team today calmly admitted slaying a widow in Michigan, but emphatically denied the bludgeon-strangulation murder here of Mrs. Janet Fay, 66, Albany, N. Y., widow.

Just after Raymond Fernandez, 34, denied the Fay killing at his trial here in that case, Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora admitted in evidence statements the two defendants purportedly made in Michigan admitting they killed Mrs. Fay.

The first statement, identified as that of Fernandez's codefendant, plump Mrs. Martha Beck, 29, quoted her as saying she struck Mrs. Fay twice with a hammer at the Valley Stream, N. Y., apartment she shared with Fernandez.

In a statement attributed to Fernandez, he was quoted as saying he twisted a scarf which had been placed around Mrs. Fay's neck.

Fernandez's admission of the killing of Mrs. Delphine Downing, 24, in her Byron Center, Mich., home, came when prosecutor Edward Robinson, jr., demanded:

"Isn't it a fact that on February 26, 1949, you shot and killed Mrs. Delphine Downing?"

"That is true," Fernandez replied calmly.

War of 1812 Painting Given to Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., July 12 (AP).—A painting by Thomas Birch depicting a sea battle in the War of 1812 and valued at $30,000 has been presented to the Naval Academy Museum.

The Academy announced today it received the painting from the estate of the late Mrs. Walter B. Jennings of Cold Spring Harbor, Long Island, N. Y. The 64-by-46-inch canvas depicts the battle between the American frigate Constitution and the British frigate Guerriere.

Montgomery's Counsel Rule Is Attacked

A Montgomery County Circuit Court rule barring out-of-county attorneys from practice resulted from legislative "skulduggery," it was argued in a brief filed yesterday.

The 16-page argument, placed in the hands of Circuit Court Judge Stedman Prescott, was drafted by attorney Louis Lebowitz of Washington and Prince Georges County.

Earlier, Lebowitz himself had been barred by the rule from representing a Silver Spring client in the court. He received special court permission to appear against the ruling.

The case was argued orally in Circuit Court last month.

Opposing Lebowitz and defending the court rule are three other attorneys. Writing in a brief for them, Robert Peter argued that the court rule is based on "perfectly valid legislation."

Under the rule, only members of the local bar, who have "bona fide" offices in the county where they spend "a reasonable part" of their working day can practice in the court.

But the legislative basis for the ruling passed the Maryland General Assembly in 1943, Lebowitz argued—tacked on at the end of the session to an innocuous bill to establish a juvenile court.

In Assembly records, he wrote, the enabling act still is indexed under the heading: "Montgomery County—Justices of the Peace—Magistrates for Juvenile Causes."

Lebowitz called the act a piece of "legislative flim-flam," and declared its "true purpose . . . was obviously to create a tight little monopoly composed only of those attorneys with offices in Montgomery County."

City Heads to Confer On Small-Loan Rules

The District Commissioners will meet with William R. Lichenberg, attorney for the Washington Association of Finance Companies, and Leon Henderson, Washington director of the Research Institute of America, Tuesday at 10 a.m. to discuss proposed small-loan regulations.

Henderson, onetime head of the Office of Price Administration, has helped prepare such legislation in various States, and made a study of loan regulations while on the staff of the Russell Sage Foundation.

"Le Diner Mysterieux — Famous Normandy Farm Mystery Dinner, designed for adventurers, gourmets, and gentlefolk of great faith in our good judgment."

WE TOOK a chance on the chef's selection. First, the French peasant-waitress delivered a non-committal piece of brown pottery which we approached with caution. Beneath the browned bread and twangy yellow cheese, there was a clear brown broth, and many onions. An excellent onion soup!

Then tiny shrimp, in a cheese and wine sauce, served on croutons, followed the salad, a typically French variety of greenery, and the hot popovers and condiment tray.

The entree, despite its mysterious billing, was a steak. But steak with a delicious wine sauce and tremendous mushrooms which tasted as though they had grown up in a vineyard.

Vegetables — eggplant, potatoes, and peas—we were not able to tackle. We can only report they looked good. But we were game again by sherbet time, and with the help of hot, savory, coffee, began to look about us.

The tremendous dining room, occupying most of the large farmhouse, should be a delight in the fall with the great fireplaces at either end. They are set off by primitive pots and pans, and faced by deep chairs and sofas.

The massive corner cupboards and sideboards are a few among many pieces Genevieve, sister of owner Marjory, brought back from Normandy.

Screened porches at front and side, and the patio in back, enable guests to eat outside. And the spring, trails, and front lawn invite guests with a yen for the outdoors.

THE Mayflower Lounge is better than a cool breeze for your morale. There's luncheon music from noon to 2:30, and dancing from 5 to midnight, with Johnny Shaw and his cohorts alternating constantly at the instruments.

Among Washingtonians we noticed there were the new Minister to Luxembourg, Mrs. Perle Mesta, and a group of her friends which included Chip Roberts, The Princess Halim, and Frank Rediker.

When you stop in, try the flakes of turkey, a la king, or if you're intent upon being chilled, the Virginia ham and chicken in Jelly Mayflower. The frappe daiquiri's will help, but the biggest aid to polar bear comfort is the deep gray, high ceilinged room itself, with the dark burgundy drapes and upholstery.

Commissioners Amend Auto Dealers Tag Rule

District motor vehicle dealers may now place "dealer" license tags on cars consigned to them as well as to those they actually own.

The City Commissioners yesterday amended license regulations to permit this after two auto dealer associations complained this was permitted in the States of Maryland and Virginia.

Alexandria Nurse Resumes Active Duty to Fight Polio

An Alexandria (Va.) registered nurse returned to active duty last night, boarding an airplane for little Rock, Ark., to help out in the polio epidemic there.

The nurse, Mrs. Josephine Osterhaus Stewart, of 3305 Carolina pl., Alexandria, is one of four recently recruited on an emergency standby status by the Fairfax County Chapter, American Red Cross.

Although inactive in nursing for more than a year, the volunteer is not new to polio epidemic work. In 1946, she served in similar capacity in New Mexico when infantile paralysis was on the rampage there.

A graduate of Garfield Memorial Hospital, nursing class of 1928, Mrs. Stewart came to Alexandria from Colorado in April. Most of her nursing experience, she said has been in Southwest.

A widow, she has two grown sons—one a Navy captain, the other employed in Veterans Administration—and four grandchildren.

Names of the other volunteers accredited for similar duty are being withheld pending their assignments, a spokesman for the county Red Cross unit said. However, the drive to bring other nurses out of retirement in case they are needed for polio epidemic work, is being continued.

Boy, 16, Dies From Polio

nosed as bulbar-spinal polio at the hospital last Saturday.

A hospital physician said the immediate cause of death was lobar pneumonia contracted by negative action of the iron lung in sucking mucous from the patient's mouth and throat into the lungs.

The dread bulbar type of polio affects brain centers controlling coughing and gagging. Thus the patient is unable to clear his throat of mucous. Efforts, not always successful, are made in such cases to clear the passages by nursing aid.

According to Mrs. Brucker, her son, a junior at Hyattsville High School, had been swimming at a Chesapeake Bay beach a week before he became ill last Thursday. The preceding Sunday he had fished at the same beach, and on July 4 he marched in an Independence Day parade in Hyattsville as a member of the Civil Air Patrol Cadets.

Last Thursday, Mrs. Brucker said, the boy complained of a backache and pains in his legs. A private physician diagnosed the ailment as summer grippe. Later young Rehm's condition worsened. A spinal tap was performed and a diagnosis of suspected polio resulted.

The disease "progressed rapidly," the Gallinger physician reported, with the boy's temperature ranging from 100 to 104 and paralysis of his extremities setting in.

There appeared to have been little likelihood the malady was contracted at the Chesapeake beach since, according to the doctor, the incubation period for the disease is believed to be 10 to 14 days.

Young Rehm was not active in school sports, his mother said. He suffered from rheumatic fever as a child and this precluded heavy exercise. He was interested in aviation and was slated for an hour and half flying time last Sunday.

Besides his mother, he is survived by his father, Fred J. Rhem, of Hyattsville; a sister, Miss Estelle Marie Rehm, and a brother, John Francis Rehm.

Perfect Day

July is scarcely a month in which to expect to find a perfect day, but last week New York City's weatherman pointed with a forecaster's natural pride to what he called a "day to remember." This invigorating day, Saturday, to be specific, had a temperature in the mid-seventies, moderate humidity, azure skies and a pleasant sea breeze. This brings up the question: What is the perfect day? Ideas vary according to locality. A perfect day in Washington could not boast a sea breeze, but, in compensation, it would have a gentle benignity of sun and a delicate whiff of trees, grass and flowers.

June, thanks to James Russell Lowell, is popularly regarded as the time of rare days, but Lowell was writing in chilly New England. Washington's perfect day could well come earlier. It could be a day in May or late April—months that, in the Nation's Capital, are so radiant in promise that the perfect day seems too beautiful ever to end. Or it could be a day in October—the month that is so luxuriant and sublime that those savoring the perfect day feel it too beautiful to last. But there sometimes steals over the city a perfect day, yes, in July—just as everyone is despairing of Washington weather, and thinking the hot Turkish bath spell never, never will come to an end.

Blow To The Press

Except to express deep sympathy with the families and newspapers concerned, it is difficult to write about the sudden death of 14 press colleagues in the crash of a Dutch plane near Bombay, India, early Tuesday. Many of the persons killed in the crash were well known to newspaper readers; several lived in Washington. They were part of a group that had been visiting Indonesia at the invitation of the Netherlands government. After six weeks in the East Indies they were returning to this country when the KLM Airlines Constellation carrying them smashed into a hillside, claiming the lives of 31 other persons in addition to those of the correspondents.

There seems no reason to accept the idea that the crash was due to sabotage. Since the outbreak of the Indonesian war, Dutch planes had been forbidden to stop in India, and the scheduled landing of this particular plane at Bombay was a concession by the Indian government because American correspondents were aboard. The most likely explanation of the tragedy is that the KLM plane simply lost visibility during a driving rainstorm while coming into a strange airport supposedly unequipped with landing aids.

Politics In Defense

The 15-12 vote by which the House Armed Services Committee has sidetracked the Tydings bill in favor of the juicier investigation of the B-36 is pretty patently a victory for Navy extremists out to thwart unification. On this occasion Chairman Vinson moved to report out the bill, but he was overpowered by a group led by Representative Van Zandt. The maneuver to give the B-36 inquiry priority probably means that the Tydings bill is dead for this session. The investigation is not scheduled to start until July 26, and judging from its political nuances, it can drag on all summer and then some.

As a measure of reprisal, Senator Tydings now has threatened to hold up the armed forces pay bill in the Senate. Such tactics are quite reprehensible. The pay bill ought to pass irrespective of the status of the Tydings bill. However, we can understand Mr. Tydings' frustration. Actually the B-36 probe has only the flimsiest connection with the efforts to bring more efficiency to the armed forces, and the investigation was seized upon as a pretext to avoid meeting the Tydings bill on its merits.

The charges of shenanigans involving defense officials in the awarding of B-36 contracts would be more impressive if they could be divorced from the obvious Navy efforts to spite the Air Force—efforts for which Mr. Van Zandt is a spokesman. So far there has been nothing but rumors which reflect the bid of some Navy partisans for a bigger Navy role in strategic bombing. It is important now that there be a serious effort to get the facts. If the skirts of defense officials are clean, and the decision to go ahead on the B-36 bomber was made on the basis of merit and the need for a bomber force in being, then the B-36 backers have nothing to fear. The investigation can be beneficial in another respect by showing the relative emphasis on strategic bombing vis-a-vis tactical aviation and vital support for ground operations.

This is not to say, however, that the B-36 investigation is justified as a weapon to beat Secretary Johnson and perpetuate the present impotency in the defense establishment. The tipoff on the present maneuver was the Van Zandt allegation that Mr. Johnson had attempted to muzzle testimony on the B-36. Secretary Johnson answered this attack effectively by his assertion that coordination was necessary to get all the facts from every branch of the service that has handled B-36 contracts, and by his assurance that there has been and is no attempt to censor testimony. The controversy that continues to rage over the B-36 is the best evidence that no muzzle exists.

Farm Bandwagon

The compromise farm plan tentatively agreed upon by a Senate Agriculture Submittee looks very much like an attempt by Republicans to get on the bandwagon out of fear of the political effects of the Brannan program. If their attempt to mediate between the Brannan plan and the Aiken law is not a compromise of the principle of flexible support in the long-range Aiken program, it is something very close to it. The most surprising thing of all is to see Senator Aiken apparently repudiating the idea that the law which bears his name was intended to provide a varying floor of agricultural price supports in relation to the supply of each commodity.

Under the new agreement, consummated by Senator Anderson, the Secretary of Agriculture would be empowered to institute direct production payments to farmers on some 10 commodities. Actually the Secretary now has such authority, but effectiveness is limited to the use of appropriated funds. The new proposal would make available commodity credit funds to finance production payments. Thus the compromise would swallow a large part of the Brannan program which is, in effect, a plan to guarantee farm incomes at present high levels. Contrary to the present theory of price support, under which the Government enters the market and buys specific commodities to keep prices at the designated support level (set according to supply), the new formula would allow prices to find their market level, with the Government making up the difference to the farmer between the market price and the income support level.

The principal reason for indorsement of the Aiken law is that, for the first time, it established a sliding scale of price supports, i. e., the greater the supply of a farm commodity, the lower the support price, down to 60 per cent of parity. Supposedly this was selected as an automatic method of discouraging overproduction and channeling farm efforts into other fields. What is discouraging is to have Senator Aiken imply that he intended to provide for supports at 90 per cent of parity and that the sliding scale was designed merely to give the Secretary of Agriculture discretionary power. Senator Aiken has since been represented as having merely intended to show what is possible under the Aiken law. But he has given a fillip to his opponents, for if the Aiken law was not intended to be flexible, then it was sold under a false label.

The basic difference between the Aiken law and the new proposal lies not so much in the immediate practical effect on the commodities concerned as in philosophy. The Aiken law, as we understand it, rejects the idea that farmers are entitled to rigid guarantees of income. It furnishes the minimum supports necessary to safeguard farmers against disastrous declines in price, and beyond that it leaves considerable freedom to the farmers' own initiative.

It is, of course, impossible to dissociate the present controversy from the political overtones of favor-currying which enter virtually every farm proposal. Nevertheless, there is a clear distinction between the cane which the Aiken law furnishes and the wheel chair which Mr. Brannan would supply. Cost is not the prime criterion, because no one knows in advance what the cost of any farm plan would be. The principal issue is simply whether the Government should be put in a position of underwriting the income of any particular group in the economy. If this sort of favoritism is to be avoided, as we feel it must be, then there is no reason why the sliding scale of the Aiken law should not take effect for at least a trial run before there is any tampering with it.

Horror And Heroism

The explosion Sunday that wrecked the cabin cruiser Halcyon, killed General Prichard and Commander Painter, and seriously injured three others aboard, came, as accidents do, with a numbing suddenness. The survivors were left in momentary shock and confusion as to just what had happened and even as to just what they themselves did. But eyewitness and survivor accounts agree that the Halcyon horror had its hero in Col. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, jr.

Colonel Biddle has had a career in business, diplomacy and the Army that any of us stay-at-homes might consider full of enough danger and distinction for several men. Perhaps a certain familiarity with constantly impending peril in wartime Europe conditioned his response on this occasion. At any rate, there seems to have been more of reflex than of reflection in the coolheaded and courageous manner in which he saved the lives of his wife and Mrs. Prichard and recovered the body of General Prichard.

General Prichard had not been in his new position as chief of Army public relations long enough for us to form any judgment of him. But he had a good wartime record in various capacities and was highly regarded by Gen. Omar Bradley. In short, he came well recommended, and we had expected much of him in a job that occasionally has not been well manned or managed.

Shanghai Lesson

The spectacle of the bad treatment of Consul Olive in Shanghai will doubtless cure the premature recognitionists in Britain (particularly) and the United States. It is a familiar episode in Chinese revolutionary history. When the foreigner came in, he was regarded as an intruder, and it was only with fire and sword that he established himself in the Celestial Empire. The resentment has never died down. Every overturn has been provoked by a shrill xenophobia which has resulted in excesses against the foreigner when power has been achieved.

In this connection there is a myth associated with the foreign entry into China which has lately been the subject of letters in our correspondence columns. It is that the British forced China open in order to sell opium. The war in 1840 has thus been called the Opium War, and it is part of the folklore of the American attachment to China. John Quincy Adams, a wise and learned Secretary of State, sought to dispose of this myth, and at the same time to put his countrymen wise about China. He did it in a review of that war before the Massachusetts Historical Society in December 1841. He said:

> The opium question is not the cause of the war. The cause of the war is the kowtow—arrogant and insupportable pretensions of China, that she will hold commercial intercourse with the rest of mankind, not upon terms of equal reciprocity, but upon the insulting and degrading forms of the relation between lord and vassal.

Skip a hundred years, and you will find precisely the same situation. However, conditions are different in this year of grace. A century ago the empire was independent of the West; now there is dependence. If the West hangs together and waits for the facts of life to penetrate the immature craniums of the Chinese Communists, the Communists will behave differently. The problem that will eventually force itself upon the Chinese Communists is twofold. First, how to persuade the villagers, to whom they have already promised a Utopia of withholding their produce, to support the towns, and, secondly, how to persuade their urban following that, after all, the foreign barbarian is the only agent who can keep their industries, service as well as manufacturing, working.

It is the sure knowledge that this problem will one day become acute in China that should guide American policy. The United States is dependent upon China for virtually nothing. One or 2 per cent of its foreign imports come from China, and of the items the main ones are tungsten and antimony. It is far, far more important to China that it sell its surplus to America than that America buy it. For China's nascent industry and its modern wants have run up imports from America amounting to 25 per cent of its total takings. America can wait till some sense dawns upon the new regime, neither courting recognition nor toying with intervention, but—and this is the main thing—making sure that the Communists are contained within their own confines till they acquire reasonableness.

End Of The Storm

Senator Hickenlooper is a hard man to convince. Despite the report of an expert hired by the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy to the effect that there has been no real loss of uranium in atomic energy plants, Mr. Hickenlooper holds that the case is "just as mysterious as ever." The case, it seems to us, is one of Mr. Hickenlooper being unwilling to accept a factual study which destroys one of the premises of his charge of "incredible mismanagement" against David E. Lilienthal.

Dr. Ernest W. Thiele of the Standard Oil Co. of Indiana, who made the study, asserts that virtually all the U-235 reported missing from the Chicago laboratory of the Atomic Energy Commission has been recovered. He also states that it is "extremely unlikely" that even a small amount of the U-235 was stolen. Even though Senator Hickenlooper stubbornly persists in seeing Communist spies under the bed, we suspect that most people will accept Dr. Thiele's explanation as reasonable. We also suspect that by now the public—and, indeed, Mr. Hickenlooper's Republican colleagues—are heartily sick of the warped sensationalism which the Iowa Senator has fanned in his play for headlines.

There also should be a feeling of relief that the public phase of the investigation of the Atomic Energy Commission has now been concluded. Mr. Hickenlooper is still holding on by his teeth over the question of security clearances, but if his lack of understanding of this issue is as great as his misconception on the missing uranium, the charges must be pretty vapid. Clearances in the last analysis are matters of individual judgment hinging on the job to be done, which is of first importance. Possibly the Atomic Energy Commission will derive some benefit and will spruce up a bit as a result of the investigation, and certainly the hearings have shown that the joint congressional committee has not been on its toes. But the hearings have consumed a vast amount of time of busy men. Certainly the Atomic Energy Commission ought now to be relieved of the constant, aimless harassment which is perhaps the worst plague of officials honestly trying to do important work.

Home Rule Paradox

A citizen of Honolulu would have been greatly puzzled had he been present at the hearing on the Kefauver home rule bill before the House District Committee last Thursday. He would have heard several persons, including newspaper editors and members of Congress, assert that local self government without a vote in national elections would be a sham and a delusion, though the reverse might be highly desirable.

As a good citizen of Hawaii he would have been pleased at the importance thus attached to one of the attributes of Statehood, a goal for which Hawaiians have been striving for many years, but he would have been surprised at the implication that his city council and his Territorial Legislature are useless and impotent bodies, because Hawaii does not have national representation, being as yet only a Territory.

He would have wondered why the speakers who urged national representation for the District of Columbia as a necessary preliminary to home rule avoided any mention of the fact that the city of Honlulu has home rule without national representation. Perhaps he would have recalled that during the hearings on Statehood for Hawaii he was told that the Territory now has self government, and that Statehood would merely give its citizens the right to participate in national affairs.

He would have been confused by the attempted differentiation between the power given Congress by the Constitution to "exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever," and the power to "dispose of and make all needful regulations respecting the Territory or other property of the United States," and would have wondered why the former should make national representation a prerequisite to local self government, and the latter make representation in Congress unimportant.

All this would have been very confusing. But the opposition by business and financial interests to home rule in Washington might have recalled to him the fact that big business in Hawaii opposed Statehood until Congress set quotas on sugar exports. Then he might have reflected on the fact that there are many ways to conceal real reasons for opposition to democratic measures, and would have concluded that, after all, specious arguments are mainly indicative of paucity of real arguments, as was tacitly admitted by some of the strongest proponents of national representation as a substitute for, or a prerequisite to, home rule.

Oxcart Roadway

I have never seen an oxcart in the city of Washington!

Perhaps that is the reason I have never had an accident: I have kept on the alert to discover one of those plodding vehicles for which the roadway of the Memorial Bridge was paved.

But others do have accidents. On my way to and from the Pentagon, I am held up on the average of twice a week for many minutes in a mile or so of cars backed up from the bridge. Indeed, the hazard of this bridge is such that a police wrecker stands in readiness at all times during those rush hours.

Belgian paving block pavements look pretty. They are traditionally appropriate for enduring memorials. Around a fountain or on a plaza, they add no hazard to shoe leather. But art is seldom utilitarian, and it definitely is not when applied to the roadway of a high-curve bridge over which tens of thousands of tires slither at high speed, morning and evening, jouncing cars over the natural roughness of the stones and skidding them from hummock to hummock of the numerous bad defects resulting from long use. And when those stones are wet, even with mist. . . .

I wonder how long Washingtonians will put up with this spring-breaking, fender-smashing, radiator-destroying oxcart roadway in this day of modern traffic. F. D. McHUGH.

Pact Obligations

Your Gallup Poll of July 8 says "67 per cent" support the Atlantic Pact.

If the poll had been taken on the more important question, "Do you know what the 'far-reaching obligations of the Atlantic Pact are?" the result would probably have been 95 per cent "no."

Many overworked Senators would tell you privately that a poll on the Hill would be hardly more encouraging. This is why the vote on ratification ought to be postponed until next winter.

In Brief

From the folks back home a kindly word of advice to our representatives who sometimes are too longwinded. An old Spanish proverb says: "The good, if brief, is doubly good; the bad, if there is little of it, is not so bad. H. S. FICKE.

America In Greece

Your editorial on the death of Themistocles Sophoulis which has been reprinted in the European edition of the New York Herald Tribune, contains much with which the majority of Greeks will agree and much on which there will be a difference of view.

"Somehow," you write, "Premier Tsaldaris, the Monarchist, was persuaded to step down and to accept in return the Ministry of Foreign Affairs." Is not this a little disingenuous? Sophoulis at that time hated the Populists and all they stood for. He was the last man in the world to associate willingly with them. As a life-long Liberal he had always hitherto been anti-Populist; as a lifelong Republican an anti-Monarchist.

How, then, was he brought into such a strange company? You say, "Somehow," but at the State Department, as most Greeks think, they have the "know-how." The American Government, as paymaster, was in a strong position to have its wishes carried out. It did not want Tsaldaris and knew that the aged Sophoulis would require considerable pressure before he would abandon views deeply held. What could be more simple than to say to him, "No Premiership, no American aid." Yes, it was just as simple as that.

Library Hours

With July all public libraries are closed on Saturday afternoons and Sunday. Just the only days readers could enjoy a few hours of leisure. Would it be asking too much to keep the libraries open on Saturday afternoons for two or three hours? One employe or two with simplified service would do.

"Illegal Evidence"

In your July 10 editorial, "Illegal Evidence," it is stated that the "Supreme Court has said unequivocally that the fourth amendment of the Constitution, forbidding unreasonable searches and seizures by Federal officers, is made equally binding upon the States by the fourteenth amendment." In the interest of clarity on this point, I would like to point out an apparent contradiction between this statement and a conclusion found in a recent textbook (revised edition of 1946) on the Constitution and constitutional decisions.

The basic conclusion is that the provisions of the Federal Bill of Rights as such still limit only the Federal Government. It is true that the court has recently applied some of the provisions of the Bill of Rights against the States. But all of these seem to be only under the first amendment.

In Palkov. Connecticut (1937) the opinion of the court was that "These (Federal Bill of Rights) in their origin were effective against the Federal Government alone. If the fourteenth amendment has absorbed them, the process of absorption has had its source in the belief that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed . . ."

Therefore, even "the right to trial by jury and immunity from prosecution except as the result of an indictment . . . are not of the very essence of a scheme of ordered liberty." Accordingly, only such provisions as the freedom of the press, free exercise of religion or the right of peaceable assembly have been declared, to my knowledge, as applicable to the States.

No one will quarrel with your statement that "in the minds of the men who adopted the Constitution it (the fourth amendment) was an indispensable safeguard of individual liberty against the writs of assistance which were so large a factor in the colonial discontent leading to the Revolution," but it is important to remember against whom these safeguards were directed.

It seems to me that in these days of great activity in the courts, the value of liberties must not be confused with the question of jurisdiction.

ROBERT C. McCARTHY.
Washington.

Editor's Note: Speaking for the Court in Wolf v. Colorado, Mr. Justice Frankfurter observed: "The security of one's privacy against arbitrary intrusion by the police—which is at the core of the fourth amendment—is basic to a free society. It is, therefore, implicit in 'the concept of ordered liberty' and as such enforceable against the States through the Due Process Clause . . . Accordingly, we have no hesitation in saying that were a State affirmatively to sanction such police incursion into privacy it would run counter to the guaranty of the fourteenth amendment. But the ways of enforcing such a basic right raise questions of a different order."

Mr. Justice Murphy, joined by Mr. Justice Rutledge, said in dissent: "It is disheartening to find so much that is right in an opinion which seems to me so fundamentally wrong. Of course, I agree with the court that the fourteenth amendment prohibits activities which are proscribed by the search and seizure clause of the fourth amendment."

'Ask Me' Role For U. S.

By Malvina Lindsay

'Dear Uncle Sam—'

THIS COUNTRY, now at the height of wealth and power, could find itself regarded by much of the world as a feared aggressor, a hated bully, an envied and resented rich man. No doubt some foreign peoples now have such feelings toward Uncle Sam. But to an increasing number of them he is becoming the helpful man at the information desk.

Point IV has been antedated in concept by the way peoples of the world are already looking to the United States for help in their practical problems of living. The things they seek knowledge about, the phases of American life they are interested in, as revealed through the State Department's INP (International Press and Publications Division), suggest a future international role for this country as a combination technical adviser, home counselor and "ask me" authority.

This trail blazing in world interest concerning things American also should help set a pattern for Point IV, provided that the President's proposal for sharing American technical knowledge with backward areas of the world ever gets under way.

Basis of most foreign inquries coming in to INP is: How can I get help in the things that affect my everyday living? And the organization, in selecting and preparing material for overseas, considers how the information will help foreign peoples in the special living difficulties their environments present.

MOST OF the world has great curiosity about the United States. There is widespread interest in our home life, culture, sports, dress, scenery and personalities—especially those of Hollywood. But the news or information that sticks is that which fills some special personal need—in health, medicine, nutrition, child care, house building, labor saving, agricultural practices, industrial production.

Sometimes an entire community is helped by American scientific information. For example, a doctor in Burma saw a technical film depicting a new operating technique in inguinal hernia. Later that day he performed two operations using this technique.

Women of the Middle East, who are now becoming more self-assertive, are eager to know more of the way American women live—and especially how they dress, make themselves attractive, find leisure from household drudgery.

From India, an old country starting a new life as a nation, come requests for knowledge as to how the United States is handling such matters as taxation, relations of labor and industry, banking and insurance, recruitment for public and military service, jail reforms for convicts, unemployment.

Recently an 11-year-old boy in the Philippines wrote an information officer asking for material on democracy "I have a chum who is a Communist," he said. "He argues all the time and I need some facts to answer him." The use by foreign publications of INP-distributed stories illustrating democratic processes—such as freedom of Americans to criticize and satirize public officials—also shows foreign interest in the political way of life here.

THE APPETITE of the world for knowledge of this country is growing rapidly. It is true that some of this curiosity takes a trivial turn, like that concerning jazz, glamour, Hollywood, and that this is disturbing to some foreign leaders who fear a superficial pattern of American culture will be imposed on them. Yet the fact that fundamentally foreign peoples are looking to this country for personal help in practical problems gives the United States a trump hand to play in building international influence and goodwill.

In world relations this country has two great advantages over totalitarian propagandists. First, it can tell the truth about itself. Second, it can offer through its science and technology practical personal help in daily living to peoples of other countries. It can thus establish personal relationships with them—at least those in free countries—and as yet it can exhibit its photographs, charts and Sears Roebuck catalogues in some places behind the iron curtain.

The more this sort of contact is carried on, the more people there will be who, when the name of the United States is mentioned, will think, not of a distant abstraction, or a mysterious "imperialist" giant, but of a personal acquaintance, even possibly a friend, who has helped make their daily living a little easier.

"What Price Freedom?"

The full-page advertisement in your issue of June 30, entitled, "What Price Freedom?" has aroused in my heart the most profund respect for the writer, Robert M. Hutchins, Chancellor of Chicago University.

I'm sure all who are interested in the progress of our country are most concerned about the way, to quote Mr. Hutchins, "We are stupidly engaged in adopting the most stupid and unjust of the ideas prevalent in Russia, and are doing so in the name of Americanism."

We don't like to see our country in the same category with the pot that called the kettle black.

Matter Of Fact

How To Hunt Guerillas

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya.—The astonishing effectiveness of guerilla warfare is the most striking phenomenon in southeast Asia. Guerillas are the Kremlin's great weapon in this part of the world. Guerillas have almost pushed the French into the sea in Indo-China. Communist guerilla forces are active in Burma. And here in Malaya a mere handful of incompetent Chinese Communist guerillas have forced the British to arm tens of thousands of men and to spend hundreds of thousands of pounds.

The reasons are simple enough. One man, with a percussion cap, like a Fourth of July toy, and a few pounds of plastic explosive can derail a train. When the train leaps the tracks, the man can be many miles away, going about his peaceful business. It is almost as easy and safe to mine a road, to ambush an unsuspecting convoy, or to kill the key men on a key plantation. As long as the guerillas' arms hold out, regular forces are amazingly helpless against them, provided the guerillas have two essential assets.

One asset is the active support of a least a part of the population, so that the guerillas can be fed, hidden, and, above all, informed. The second asset is a safe place—a "funkhole," the British call it—to which the guerillas can escape for rest and reorganization.

BRITISH strategy here is now designed to deny these assets to the Communists. The Malayans are anti-Communists; but nearly half the people of Malaya are Chinese. The Chinese here are influenced by what has happened in China. Thus the Communists' chief sources of support have been the villages of Chinese squatters who have settled on public or private land, often deep in the jungle, to grow their rice or millet.

The British have been driven to using novel techniques to cut the Communist fighters off from the squatters' villages. First, they are creating a complex network of interlocking police posts in or near the villages. If a village helps a guerilla band, the British then employ a technique they call "screening." Ordinarily, captured guerillas are hanged after an extremely rapid trial. But a guerilla captured in the area of a guilty village may be given a chance to buy his life.

The captive is placed behind a screen in the village police post. He peers through a peephole while the entire population of the village files by. He identifies those who have helped his band—"She gave food," "He gave money," "He is a bandit." If there is real evidence to support such an accusation, the accused may be deported or hanged.

There is another, more drastic method. An incorrigible village, known regularly to help the Communists, may be moved bodily away and put behind barbed wire. Thus the British are isolating the guerillas. And the technique is beginning to work. Accurate information on guerilla movements is now beginning to come in from the squatters' villages.

THE BRITISH have also developed techniques for dealing with with the "funkholes." The guerillas hide out in the mountain jungles, and it is only necessary to fly over the mountains to realize what magnificent cover the mountains provide. Here is a continuous green umbrella, which wholly screens all movements. Since the British learned to pierce this umbrella they have discovered large guerilla camps, complete with lecture halls plastered with pictures of Stalin and appropriate quotations from the Communist classics.

One way of piercing the umbrella is an "area shoot." The area of a known Communist concentration is carefully mapped, and planes are dispatched to shoot up the green, unprotesting jungle as methodically as a farmer plows a field. This kills few guerillas (a shallow slit trench is almost complete protection) but it frightens them and keeps them on the run.

A more important technique is to "beat" the guerillas in a trap, as pheasants are beaten to the waiting guns in England. Air drops make this possible, since without air drops the troops doing the beating could not be supplied. The troops close in on a guerilla concentration, and the guerillas retreat (as they must, for guerillas can never stand and fight). If all goes well (which it often does not, since many guerillas slither out between the "beaters") the guerillas hit a "stop." This is a concentration of fire power, usually along a river line. As this is written, two such "bandit hunts" are under way.

THE BRITISH also hope to reach an arrangement with Siam to close the long Siamese border, over which more than 1000 guerillas have escaped since the British noose began to tighten. Thus by destroying the last funkholes, by isolating the guerillas from all support, and by arming 25 men to each guerilla under arms, the British hope in time to win their war. But few think that it can be done in less than a year.

That a handful of bedraggled Communist guerillas could so challenge British power, even while most of the people here are active British allies, is a remarkable fect, and a fact which American military planners would do well to study. For guerilla warfare, that most primitive form of warfare, is changing the face of postwar Asia.

Board Rejects Krug Proposal

segregated basis would remain nonsegregated."

Krug further declared that "there will be no backward step of any sort" and that the proposal turned down by the board yesterday was designed "to make progress in the President's civil rights program."

The board's refusal to approve the Krug plan yesterday was on the insistance of James E. Schwab, leader of the segregation forces, that the board not "buy a pig in a poke" or "jump through a hoop." Later, he talked to reporters about officials "who talk out of both sides of their mouth."

Argument in Semantics

The argument over Interior's proposal to change the board's by-laws developed into an argument in semantics—words and their meanings.

The board earlier this month sent Krug a proposal for ending the dispute. Krug objected to the inclusion of a section referring to "designations" on a city-wide plan of recreation facilities, charging this was no change from the present segregation by-law.

He then proposed, by letter, press release and through Interior's representative on the board, National Capital Parks Superintendent Irving C. Root, the following substitute for the present by-law:

"The board will make every possible and realistic effort toward the removal of racial segregation in public recreation in such sequence and at such rate of progression, as may be consistent with the public interest, public order and effective administration. The board by majority vote of the whole board shall from time to time issue instructions to the superintendent to implement this policy."

45 Minutes Notice Not Enough

The first sentence already has been adopted by the board as a statement of policy. The second sentence was suggested at Monday's meeting at the Interior Department by District Commissioner Gordon R. Young as a boiled-down version of a board proposal.

But Schwab said Krug had taken seven days to turn down its more lengthy proposal and now wanted the board to accept his idea on 45 minutes' notice. Chairman Harry S. Wender said he probably would vote for the idea in the end but would defer to Schwab's demands for further discussion at a closed by-laws committee meeting.

Voting with Schwab and Wender were Walter Fowler, the commissioners' representative, and Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, the Board of Education's alternate representative. Voting to accept the Krug proposal at once were Root and Mrs. Alice C. Hunter, only Negro on the board.

Accuse Krug of Switch

Both Wender and Milo F. Christiansen, the Recreation Board's superintendent, said Krug had changed his position since the original Interior-Recreation conference July 1 following racial clashes at some of Interior's nonsegregated pools. Anacostia pool later was closed.

Christiansen said there "certainly has been a change of heart over there."

Wender said he had heard that one member of the Recreation Board and a number of organization representatives had met privately with Krug and then sent President Truman a message charging a sellout of the civil rights program." He did not elaborate.

Wender at one point suggested the possibility, if Interior should release its six pools to the board, that some be run some days for white children and other days for Negroes. Prior to this year, four were used by whites and two by Negroes.

But Krug's latest statement appeared to put the whole swimming pool question up in the air again. Wender insisted Krug had agreed to turn over the pools "with no strings attached" and that he had told the secretary this would mean their segregated use.

Maryland P-TA Meets

One hundred and seventy-five parents representing Parent-Teacher Associations throughout Maryland took up residence at the University of Maryland yesterday for a four-day training conference.

Mrs. Marguerite Scheid, field consultant for the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, keynoted the conference, declaring that good P-TA leaders also must be able to follow. Officers, she said should go along with the membership and not always try to exert their will on others.

Theme of the conference is "We Plan Together." During the sessions the parents will be instructed in how to conduct meetings, plan and publicize programs.

Every child has three parents in addition to his mother and father, Mrs. Scheid said. They are his teacher, the person who is his character leader—generally the boy or girl Scout director—and the older friend who is the child's confidant.

Anyone who has a relationship with children in a parent role needs parent education, she said.

Mrs. Elmer Brittingham, president of Pocomoke P-TA, described her group's success in training parents to instruct their children in sex education. The course was given by a doctor, minister and nurse.

Mrs. Dorothy Vane, vice president of the Rockville High School P-T A, discussed a forum in which parents, teachers and students described what each expected of the other.

Truman Firm On Civil Rights

By Robert S. Allen

President Truman has shifted gears on his economic program, but he is standing pat on civil rights.

He made this clear in a talk with Senator Richard Russell, (R., Ga.) head of the Southern bloc.

The meeting took place in the White House, at Russell's request. He said his group, as Democrats, wanted to find a way out of the stalemate with the President on the civil rights issue. Russell suggested that the so-called "Arkansas Plan" might be the answer.

This formula, sponsored by Rep. Brooks Hays, (D., Ark.) would abolish poll taxes by constitutional amendment and empower federal prosecution of lynchers where local authorities failed to do so.

President Truman declared the proposal was not acceptable to him.

Russell then inquired whether the President would be willing to consider the Hays' formula as a basis for further discussion.

Again, the answer was a friendly but firm "no."

That ended the meeting.

Mayor O'Dwyer Sees N. Y. Primary Fight

New York, July 12 (U.P.).—Mayor William O'Dwyer returned from a visit to President Truman today and said that "as matters stand now there certainly will be a primary fight" for the Democratic nomination for mayor of New York.

But O'Dwyer refused to say who in such a primary would run against Frank S. Hogan, District Attorney of New York County, who was picked by three of the city's five county Democratic leaders as mayoralty candidate.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Floor Under Unemployment

WHAT finally got into President Truman's Economic Report and the review of his Council of Economic Advisers is merely a small part of the vast amount of material winnowed and sifted. There were those, for example, who wanted to press much harder on the need to sustain purchasing power in industrial areas where unemployment is greatest.

Childs

The view frequently expressed is that unemployment insurance is today of a volume and continuity to hold up the purchasing power of jobless workers. Thus a cushion of purchasing power is created which did not exist after 1929, and this cushion will prevent a serious depression.

In the long debate over the economic report that comfortable assumption was sharply challenged. The AFL supplied significant documentation to support the charge that in State after State the unemployment insurance system has been whittled down so that the jobless find it difficult to get benefits they thought they were entitled to get.

The President's report took account of this charge, but in a generalized way. In a brief discussion of social security the President declared:

"Under current economic conditions, it is urgent that the unemployment compensation system be broadened and liberalized. I recommend that the Congress strengthen our Federal-State unemployment insurance system by establishing minimum benefit standards for all parts of the country and by broadening coverage. These minimum standards should provide benefits for 26 weeks ranging up to $30 a week for single individuals, with additional amounts for dependents."

Under the Federal-State unemployment insurance system each of the 48 States sets up its own system. The Federal Government does not impose any standards other than minimum requirements for decent administration.

WILLIAM GREEN, AFL president, in a letter to Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing, pointed out that employers had been given rebates of nearly five billion dollars for stabilizing employment as provided in State unemployment insurance laws. Stabilization was not difficult in the war years and during the postwar boom. But now Green wants to know what is actually being done in the face of layoffs in industry to stabilize unemployment.

Nelson H. Cruikshank, director of social insurance for the AFL, charges that under the pressure of powerful lobbies many State Legislatures have utterly distorted their unemployment insurance laws. His files are full of cases of jobless men and women who come up against technical regulations that make it difficult or impossible to get insurance benefits.

One case is that of a sheet-metal worker in Delaware who was laid off last September from a job which paid $2.25 an hour. Six days later when he failed to report for a job which paid 75 cents an hour less than the union scale he was disqualified from benefits under an interpretation of the Delaware law holding he had refused "suitable work."

IN IOWA, a man left his job to accept a better job. After 10 full weeks and two partial weeks of employment in the new job he was laid off for lack of work. Under the Iowa law a man has to have 12 full weeks of work in his last job before he is eligible for unemployment benefits, and because this worker fell short of the requirement, through no fault of his own, by two half weeks he was denied benefits.

Twenty-two State Legislatures have amended their employment insurance laws to include a phrase covering those who leave jobs voluntarily "without good cause attributable to the employer." Thousands are ruled ineligible for benefits under this provision if they have shifted jobs in the recent past.

In his report, the President spoke of the need to amend State laws. But the likelihood of any immediate change in these laws is not much greater than the likelihood that Congress will comply with the President's request for changes in Federal law to cope with the economic decline.

The President's advisers were keenly aware of the need to shore up purchasing power. They could see just ahead the looming threat of a strike in steel with its fearsome economic potentialities.

During the postwar boom the strikes that have occurred have been largely inflationary in their effect; they contributed to the scarcity of goods in a seller's market. But a strike in a basic industry such as steel would today in all likelihood have a deflationary influence. It was one of the big unknowns confronting those trying to chart the Nation's economic course for the next six months.

Racial Bias in U. S. Denounced By 44-Nation Church Council

Chichester, Eng., July 12 (AP).—The central committee of the 44-nation World Council of Churches denounced race discrimination today, protesting against anti-Negro bias in South Africa and the Southern United States.

The churchmen, attending a conference on world church problems, reaffirmed a resolution of the council in Amsterdam last August condemning "flagrant violations of human rights," in many parts of the world.

However, they shied away from a formal denunciation of South Africa's Negro segregation when Dr. Kenneth C. Grubb of the Church of England warned:

"Christian leaders in South Africa have advised us that such action would not be a good idea at the present time. It would look like interference from outside."

Bishop W. J. Walls of Chicago, a Negro of the United States African Zion Church, told the churchmen:

"I am a Westerner with Western ideas. My interests and my political and economic destiny lie with the Western world. If the people under persecution in Soviet dominated states deserve our sympathy, we must also remember those in South Africa and the Southern United States."

Dr. J. Earl Moreland, of Ashland, Va., president of Randolph-Macon College, praised Brazil's handling of the problem. He said:

"Brazil is carrying out one of the noblest experiments in race relations in recent history. There is complete amity among all races. Brazil is entitled to a great deal of applause for its attempts to meet the problem."

Clifford Morehouse of New York City, editor of the Episcopalian publication, The Living Church, declared the church "must put its own house in order" before its condemnation of race prejudice would carry weight.

Fertilizer Shortage Over, Truman Is Told

President Truman was told yesterday that the once serious fertilizer shortage has been substantially overcome.

Clifton A. Woodrum, former Democratic Representative from Virginia, said he gave Mr. Truman an up-to-date oral report on the fertilizer situation.

Woodrum, now president of the American Plant Food Council, Inc., told reporters that serious shortages, especially of nitrogen, have been largely overcome.

Riggs Bank Surplus Set at $8,500,000

The board of directors of the Riggs National Bank yesterday authorized the transfer of one million dollars from the profit and loss account to the surplus account, making the latter $8,500,000, Robert V. Fleming, president of the bank, announced.

This action, together with the capital account of five million dollars, substantially increases the bank's loan limit, thereby enlarging the credit facilities available to its clients.

The directors also declared the regular dividends of $3 a share, payable Friday to stockholders of record yesterday, and $3 a share, payable October 15, to stockholders of record September 30.

The election of Kenneth Norwood Alvey as assistant cashier also was announced. He has been serving as assistant head teller at the main office.

This is equivalent to a complete air change nearly every 10 minutes in Munsey's 100,000 cubic-foot lobby. Christopher H. Pope, Munsey president, said yesterday that installation of machinery and ducts was completed within six weeks.

Business failures in the week ended July 7 dropped to the lowest level since January; they totaled 153 compared with 177 the preceding week, Dun & Bradstreet report . . . An historical and analytical survey of the banks which have failed in the District of Columbia in this century is contained in volume 24 of the Catholic University of America's Studies in Economics.

NEW VENTURE: The opening of the office of the James A. Hewitt Properties Management Corporation for the conduct of a real estate business at 1720 I st. nw was announced yesterday. Hewitt has been associated with the real estate and construction business since 1918 when he became associated with the Thompson-Starrett Co., Inc. After the latter assignment he returned to FHA as manager of the Washington insuring office, resigning on June 6 to start the new business.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Grains reflected a more optimistic than expected crop report in today's Board of Trade session. The session was marked by nervousness in all grain pits, with prices moving quickly in either direction.

Wheat and corn started lower, and then recovered, only to dip again. The nearby deliveries of corn managed to finish above yesterday's close, but all deliveries of wheat were lower.

Soybeans, rye and lard followed an upward trend, with the July beans contract up around 5 cents at times, a new high since last January at $2.59½.

At the close wheat was 1⅞ to 2 cents lower; corn was ½ higher to 1½ lower; oats were ⅜ to ¾ lower; rye was 1 cent to 3¼ higher; soybeans were ¼ lower to 4¼ higher, and lard was 10 to 20 cents a hundredweight higher.

Maryland Tobacco

Baltimore, July 12 (AP).—Prices were steady to slightly lower on the southern Maryland tobacco auctions today after reaching their peak of the season on Monday.

Figures compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture and the Maryland Department of Markets showed that the greatest declines were on lower quality offerings.

At the same time, however, the leaf offered for sale averaged a little better in quality. Sales were fairly light.

The high average was reached on Monday when 389,164 pounds were auctioned at an average of 56.29 a hundred pounds. This brought sales for the nine-week-old season to 21,950,072 pounds at an average of 54.09.

Maryland growers continued to show satisfaction with their harvest of dollars from the good 1948 crop. This was reflected in the small percentage of baskets now consigned to the Maryland Tobacco Cooperative for the purpose of taking price support loans rather than selling to the tobacco companies. An estimated 2 per cent of the baskets were shunted into the loan program.

Prices on the principal grades traded:

Heavy crop: Good cherry red, unchanged at 67; fair cherry red, 62, down 2; fair red, 40, down 5, and low cherry red unchanged at 52.

Tips: Fair cherry red, 48, down 8; fair red, 40, down 5.

Business Outlook

Hindsight In Stocks Proves About as Difficult as Foresight

By J. A. Livingston

This little game is called backcasting, as distinguished from forecasting. I learned it from Alvin J. Wilkins, vice president and sales manager of Wellington Fund.

Wilkins will say, "Here is a list of 20 common stocks. Pick out the three which, if you had the chance now, you'd have bought on January 1, 1939."

With the benefit of the hacklook and remembering that 1939 was the year Hitler marched into Poland, you study the list: Allied Chemical & Dye, American Can, American Telephone, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler Corp., Columbia Gas, Corn Products, Dow Chemical, duPont, General Electric, General Foods, International Nickel, Loew's, Pennsylvania Railroad, Procter & Gamble, Sears Roebuck, Standard Brands, United Aircraft, United States Steel, and Westinghouse Electric.

Livingston

Have you made your selections? The following table shows the actual gain from January 1, 1939, to January 1, 1949, in terms of market appreciation and dividends received throughout the period:

Stock	% Improvement
Sears Roebuck	186%
Bethlehem Steel	94
Columbia Gas	90
Chrysler Corp.	81
Dow Chemical	68
Procter & Gamble	62
DuPont	61
American Tel & Tel	60
United States Steel	55
General Foods	48
Loew's	46
Pennsylvania Railroad	41
Allied Chemical	33
Corn Products	31
Standard Brands	29
General Electric	28
Westinghouse Electric	20
American Can	15
United Aircraft	12
International Nickel	—13

After that demonstration, Wilkins will look at you, his face aglow with the astonishment he expects you to betray. "Well," he asks, "would you have figured that Sears, Roebuck did twice as well as Bethlehem; that Bethlehem did six times as well as American Can, and that United Aircraft and International Nickel, both supposed to be war stocks, did poorest of all?"

When you have acknowledged that maybe you weren't so hot as a backcaster, Wilkins is all sympathy and persuasion. He'll say, "nobody can pick 'em—even looking backwards. So think how much harder it is to pick 'em looking forward."

That brings Wilkins around to what he has been leading up to all the while—the mutual fund, such as Massachusetts Investors, State Street Investment, Group Securities, Incorporated Investors, Keystone Shares, Fundamental Investors and, of course, Wellington.

Wilkins explains that the average person can't afford to have an investment basket with only one or two stocks in it. Those stocks might go bad. The average man must have many stocks as protection against unforeseeable social, political and economic vicissitudes. By buying only one share of Wellington Fund, say, the small investor can own a piece, albeit a very small piece, of many major companies like Sears, or Bethlehem, or duPont. And the investor will benefit from trained management to boot.

At the time when Wall Street is in the doldrums, when many brokers and dealers are not making ends meet, Wilkins, along with the sales managers of the mutual funds, smiles and smiles and smiles. On March 31, assets of 86 open-end investment trusts (mutual funds) approached $1,562,000,000, or nearly 3½ times the total at the end of 1940.

This gain has taken place even though some brokers argue that when an investor buys an investment trust, he gives up control over his money and lets others make all decisions for him. In addition, they point out that the "load," that is the sales charge, usually amounts to 7½ per cent or about a year and a half to two years of dividends.

Other brokers find mutual funds profitable. The broker gets a commission on the sale of the shares. In addition, he usually gets reciprocal business. The investment trust will naturally give its orders to brokers who sell its shares.

Investment trust managers point out that an investor pays the commission only once—when he buys, that the shares are not sold for in-and-out-trading but for long-term holding, and that nothing can be bought without a commission, whether it be insurance, an automobile, or advertising.

As a result of the boom in their public acceptance, some fund-managers dream of the day when people will put their money in investment trusts as freely as they now do in savings banks or Government bonds, when the small investor will come to him instead of his going after the investor. Then commissions will be unnecessary.

Ah, paradise.

Capital Transit Stock Deal Put Off Until Fall

Sale of the Capital Transit Co.'s controlling stock probably will be delayed until fall or winter.

North American Co., present holders of the 109,458 shares which a group of Florida businessmen have contracted to buy, yesterday announced the purchase agreement has been extended until November 1. It was to expire yesterday.

Purpose of the extension is understood to be to allow time to obtain Interstate Commerce Commission approval as well as that of the Securities and Exchange Commission. SEC is expected to act shortly and might have acted yesterday had not the extension been announced.

Filing of Application Awaited

ICC is now awaiting the possible filing by the Florida group of an application for approval. The group's attorney, John J. Manning, said in Washington yesterday he did not think the group has as yet determined what it will do.

Under the ICC act, any change in control of two transit companies requires ICC approval. Capital Transit owns a subsidiary line, the Montgomery Bus Lines, which runs to Rockville, Md., and thus presumably comes under ICC control although that agency plays no part in setting bus or trolley fares.

ICC is obliged to determine whether such a sale, if it has jurisdiction, is "in the public interest." This broad phrase covers such matters as financial responsibility, moral character and other facts about the purchasers as well as their ability to operate the company, a spokesman said last night.

ICC Can Call Hearing

If the Florida group, headed by L. E. Wolfson of Jacksonville, does not file an application with ICC, the commission can call a hearing on its own.

Any hearing and subsequent appeal procedures—especially if there are any objections to the sale from other parties—could extend into 1950.

A group of local stockholders has protested SEC approval of the sale and has sought either to have the transit line buy in the stock itself or to set up a syndicate to purchase the shares.

The Wolfson group has agreed to pay North American $2,189,160 or $20 a share. North American some years ago was ordered by SEC to sell the stock under terms of the Holding Company Act.

Funk Denies Ballot Fake

Saturday afternoon, and entertained the guests that night.

He said he visited his father's family in Frankfort Sunday and on Monday was in Cincinnati on business. He was a precinct worker in Lexington on Tuesday, election day, he said.

Funk said he first learned during the Christmas holidays, while visiting in California, that he was under suspicion in the case.

Rudolph B. Salmon, Chicago, a handwriting expert, was introduced by the defense to discredit the testimony of a Government expert, W. G. Blackburn, that Funk signed 219 of the 254 phony ballots.

Salmon said it was his opinion that the person who wrote exhibits identified as Funk's actual handwriting did not sign the names that were forged on the ballots.

He said Funk's handwriting was more consistent than the questioned writing. He said he found some general similarities in characteristics of the two writings, but "more numerous dissimilarities."

Funk's attractive wife, Nancy, followed her husband to the stand. When the defense finishes its testimony in Funk's behalf it will begin its efforts to clear Prichard.

The prosecution closed its case yesterday. The principal witness was Circuit Judge William B. Ardery, Paris, who testified Prichard told him "he and two other young men" prepared the fraudulent ballots.

Senate Group Ends Hearings On Carson

By the United Press

The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday ended hearings on the nomination of John Carson to be a Federal Trade commissioner after Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) criticized Senate pigeon-holing of President Truman's appointments.

He said there had been "too much delay" in reporting the President's nominations to the Senate floor and that "any President is entitled to a vote on the floor on any nomination."

The Commerce Committee has not yet acted on the nomination of Leland Olds to the Federal Power Commission, and E. M. Webster to the Federal Communications Commission.

Mr. Truman on Monday was forced to withdraw the nomination of his good friend, Fred A. Canfil, for reappointment as United States marshal at Kansas City, Mo. In addition, the Senate Judiciary Committee has postponed indefinitely a hearing on the nomination of Carroll O. Switzer of Des Moines as United States attorney for the Southern District of Iowa.

Earlier in the session, the Senate Armed Services Committee tabled the nomination of former Governor Mon C. Wallgren of Washington as chairman of the National Security Resources Board, forcing Mr. Truman to withdraw it.

The final witness on the Carson nomination was Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis, jr. He appeared to answer Carson's charges that Lewis was out to "get" him.

Lewis said that Carson, Washington director of the Cooperative League of America, asked the Federal Trade Commission to look into his personal source of income to determine whether a conspiracy existed between Lewis and certain trade organizations.

"I considered this a blow below the belt," Lewis said. "My integrity as a reporter had never been attacked before."

Carson told the committee he fully supports the free enterprise system and regards the cooperative movement as a supplement to it.

$590 Million For Interior Clears Hurdle

The Senate Appropriations Committee voted to increase funds for reclamation yesterday, but slashed into the Administration's public power program.

It approved a $590,685,911 Interior Department money bill that was shorn of many controversial power projects approved by the House when it passed the measure.

The bill presented to the Senate would increase reclamation funds by $36,811,747 over the $317,790,037 allowed by the House, bringing the total to $354,601,784.

Budget requests for the Reclamation Bureau for the year which began July 1 were $376,928,500.

In addition, the committee approved contract authorizations totaling $10,339,700 for the bureau.

Shorn from the House-passed bill by the committee were funds for the controversial West-Side power lines and steam plant on the Central Valley (Calif.) project; several transmission lines on the Colorado-Big Thompson project; the Kerr-Anaconda line in Montana; and power transmission facilities of the Southwestern Power Administration.

Funds for the Bonneville Power Administration, however, were increased.

Actual construction funds for the Reclamation Bureau were raised from the House amount of $296,530,537 to $331,734,739.

Chairman Hayden (D., Ariz.) of the Appropriations Interior Department subcommittee said the Senate group had departed from the House policy of approving a flat 15 per cent cut in all reclamation construction budget requests.

He said such cuts were allowed only where new contracts are to be entered into, but on continuing contracts the full amounts were allowed.

Hayden said there is nothing in the bill to prevent payment of salary to Reclamation Commissioner Michael Straus, who has been a target of congressional criticism. Strauss already has gone without pay for five months as a result of earlier congressional action, not carried over in the present bill, which required that his position and that of the California regional director, Richard Boke, be filled by engineers.

Passage of Pace Bill by House Next Week Forecast by Leaders

By The Associated Press

Administration farm leaders predicted after a mass meeting of House Democrats yesterday that the House next wek will pass the Pace bill permitting a three-crop trial run of a controversial farm price subsidy plan.

The plan was offered by Secretary of Agriculture Brannan. It would permit the prices of perishable crops to drop to their natural level, but pay subsidies out of the Treasury to bolster farmers' income.

It contrasts with the present law whereby the prices of crops are buoyed up by Government purchases and loans. Still another plan is the Aiken farm law, passed by the Republican Eightieth Congress and due to go into effect next year. As interpreted by its author, Senator Aiken (R., Vt.), this law would permit but not compel the Secretary of Agriculture to decrease the support levels in times of surpluses.

Debate Set Monday

Speaker Rayburn said the farm bill debate will begin in the House Monday.

The Pace measure for try-outs of the Brannan plan has been approved by the House Agriculture Committee. The bill also would repeal the Aiken law for flexible price supports and continue the existing high-level, rigid supports for major farm commodities.

Meanwhile, the House Republican policy committee—meeting in another part of the Capitol—tentatively agreed to present a substitute bill calling for a one-year continuation of the present farm law, which calls for the rigid supports.

The Republicans' aim is to block even a trial run for the Administration's subsidy or "production payment" idea known as the Brannan plan. Their proposal also would set aside the Aiken law for one year.

GOP Plans Strategy

House GOP Leader Martin said House Republicans will get together early next week to plan their strategy on the farm legislation batt

Indonesians Angry At Writers, Is Report

Hongkong, July 12 (U.P.).—Mrs. Dorothy Brandon, New York Herald Tribune correspondent, was in Hongkong today when she learned of the crash of a Netherlands airliner near Bombay with American correspondents whom she accompanied on a visit to Indonesia.

Mrs. Brandon said that Bertram D. Hulen, New York Times correspondent among those killed, was taking his wife in Washington a birthday present.

Mrs. Brandon said Indonesians were so angry over the developments in the visit that she had believed they might even sabotage the plane.

Mrs. Brandon said Indonesian Republican President Soekarno and other leaders were furious because they believed the correspondents, guests of The Netherlands government on their visit, were being influenced by Dutch press officers, and believed that they were filing pro-Dutch dispatches.

[A New York Herald-Tribune interviews with Mrs. Brandon did not mention the possibility of sabotage.]

Fear Kept Writer Off Fatal Plane

Manila, July 12 (AP).—Fear of sabotage prevented Mrs. Dorothy Brandon of the New York Herald Tribune from taking the Dutch airliner which crashed today near Bombay, William R. Mathews said tonight.

Mathews, publisher of the Tucson (Ariz.) Star, and Mrs. Brandon are the two only known survivors of the party of American correspondents who had toured Indonesia.

Mathews, who left the party at Singapore, said Mrs. Brandon told him: "I wouldn't go on that plane for anything. It's going to be sabotaged as sure as you live."

There has been no indication the KLM Constellation was sabotaged.

Asked why Mrs. Brandon would have believed so strongly in the possibility of sabotage, the Arizona publisher replied:

"Because of what we had seen. We were unanimous that the Indonesians were not ready for self-government and that chaos would follow."

Dutch rule in the East Indies has been contested since the end of World War II. An Indonesian republic was set up. Dutch and Indonesian Republican forces have been fighting on while the case has been considered by the United Nations.

The American correspondents' tour was under the auspices of the Dutch government.

Mathews said all of the correspondents had been impressed by the possibility of sabotage in the crash of another KLM Constellation which had brought them to the Indies. This plane crashed off Bari, Italy, June 23, killing 33 persons.

Searchers Find Bodies of Two In Airlift Crash

Frankfurt, Germany, July 12 (AP). Ground searchers found two United States Air Force fliers dead today beside a coal-laden C-54 airlift transport which crashed last night in the Russian zone 50 miles northwest of Berlin. A third member of the crew was believed dead.

Twenty-eight Americans and 23 British airmen previously were killed in airlift accidents. The airlift has been maintained since the lifting of the blockade in May to supplement road, rail and barge transport.

The Air Force withheld the names of the victims of the C-54 crash pending notification of kin.

because they decided to return by other routes.

The tour conductor who died was Lynn C. Mahan, 40, vice president of the public relations firm of Theodor Swanson & Co., New York, who had worked on several newspapers.

The other dead, according to the best information here, included 20 passengers and 11 KLM employes. The passengers were 17 Dutch, two Chinese and one Briton.

Besides the regular crew of 10, which included two stewardesses, the KLM operations manager at Karachi was aboard.

Matthews said upon arriving at Manila, the Philippines, by a Pan American plane from Bangkok, Siam, that Mrs. Brandon refused to return aboard the Constellation for fear of sabotage. He quoted her as saying the plane would be "sabotaged as sure as your life" because most of the party had been impressed by the Dutch side of the Indonesian-Dutch conflict.

A Herald Tribune spokesman in New York, however, said Mrs. Brandon had been given a special assignment in Manila and had not planned to return on the Dutch plane.

(In New York, the delegation of the Indonesian Republic issued a statement that "the possibility of sabotage by someone associated or identified with the republic is absurd and unthinkable.")

KLM officials at The Hague, said their first impression from reports at the scene was that the crash was caused by bad weather conditions.

Another Constellation on which the party had gone to Indonesia crashed near Bari, Italy, on June 23, while on the return trip, killing 31 persons.

Hundreds of peasants and a municipal waterworks engineer were witnesses of the crash at about 11 a. m. (1:30 a. m. Eastern daylight time) today.

This was about an hour and a half after the plane first flew over the airport in the rain, seeking to land.

The witnesses said a wing tip of the big plane struck a rock on the hilltop, the plane spun and crashed amid a shower of sparks. Charred wreckage was found scattered over a huge area. About 200 trees in the vicinity were burned and singed.

Many of the bodies were burned and difficult to recognize. One woman was alive when rescuers reached the scene, but she died within a few minutes.

C. H. Timberlake, United States consul, said his office would be working the entire night collecting bodies and making identifications. Thirty-three bodies had been brought to the airport by nightfall. All valuables found at the scene were given to police for safekeeping.

Timberlake described the disaster, India's worst in aviation, as a "great loss to the newspaper world." U. S. Ambassador Loy Henderson was expected here Wednesday to attend a funeral for the Americans.

The plane, named Franeker after a Dutch town, left Batavia Sunday, landed at Bangkok and Calcutta and stopped overnight at New Delhi. It left New Delhi, the Indian capital, in good weather at 7 a. m. for Bombay, where it was due at 10:10 a. m. to refuel. It was due in Cairo tonight and Amsterdam Wednesday.

Ban on Landing Relaxed

To express its sympathy with the Indonesian Republicans in their fight with the Dutch, the Indian government banend the landing of Dutch planes in India many months ago.

However, a special request of the newspaper people that the ban be relaxed in their behalf so they might return by way of India was granted by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

At a reception by Ambassador Henderson at New Delhi last night some of the correspondents said they made the request because they wanted to avoid the long overwater hop to Mauritius, the French island in the Indian Ocean.

When the plane reached this area, heavy rain had been falling continuously since Monday morning and rain for two more days was forecast.

Pilots Unfamiliar With Area

KLM officials said their pilots were unfamiliar with the Bombay landing facilities because the company never served this area.

Santa Cruz is one of two airfields for Bombay. Juhu field is right beside it. The airport is fringed by palms and banana trees and the hill rises just to the east. Authorities had once considered and then abandoned a plan for dynamiting the hill.

The Indian government immediately granted special permission for KLM to send Dutch technicians by plane to the scene to conduct an investigation of the disaster. The government also started its own inquiry.

At The Hague, Dutch Premier Willem Drees told Parliament the Dutch people felt the accident to be a national disaster.

servations. The pilot did, and spotted the burning plane.

The company which operated the cut-rate plane, Standard Airlines of Long Beach, was given 30 days by the Civil Aeronautics Board June 21 to quit business. The CAB revoked Standard Airlines' permit on the ground that it had repeatedly violated regulations by flying scheduled routes. The line appealed to the United States Court of Appeals in Washington.

Crash Occurs in Canyon

Standard, in its two-engined Curtiss-Wright C-46 planes, charged $113 cross-country fare. Scheduled airlines charge $181 for the same trips.

The crash occurred in sagebrush-covered Box Canyon at 1850-feet elevation in the Santa Susana Mountains, some 25 miles northwest of Los Angeles. Early arrivals at the scene painted a gruesome picture of bodies strewn for 400 feet across a ridge, of others sprawled grotesquely over rocks, and of survivors trying to fight free of the burning cabin.

Five persons, one a girl with her foot torn off, had stumbled 300 yards down the rocky slope to a fire road. Two others, one a soldier, had made their way nearly two miles toward a through highway before rescuers picked them up.

Fire crews succeeded in extinguished the blaze quickly, but most of the fuselage was destroyed.

The right wing had been torn off when it clipped a rock on the edge of a small ridge. The plane itself skidded sideways some 500 feet before it piled up at the base of a 40-foot tower of rock. Some bodies were thrown 50 feet.

Stewardess Found Dead

Rescuers had brought out 30 bodies. Two others died after rescue. The body of Stewardess Marianne Rose was found just clear of the wreckage.

A steady stream of ambulances climbed the narrow dirt road to bring out the injured, and later load the dead bodies. An odd touch was given the rescue operations by the presence of 30 followers of the religious cult leader, Krishna Venta. The cult lives in a stone house not far from the crash. Its long-haired, bearded and robed members padded barefoot back and forth up the stony hill carrying stretchers of dead and injured.

The injured were taken to hospitals in Ventura and Los Angeles counties. Because the bodies were taken to several mortuaries, it was impossible to compile immediately a complete list of the dead.

The plane had come from New York via Chicago, Kansas City and Albuquerque.

The list of identified dead and injured included:

DEAD

Capt. Roy G. White, 35, pilot, Wilmington, Calif. Harold Tucker, co-pilot, 30, Long Beach, Calif. Marianne Rose, 24, stewardess, Long Beach. Joel Freeman, 46, furrier, Los Angeles. Mrs. Rogers Asks Sabotage Inquiry

By the United Press

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (R., Mass.), called yesterday for a Congressional investigation of possible sabotage in plane crashes near Bombay, India, and Burbank, Calif.

She introduced a resolution to empower the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to look into not only these two crashes—which were cited specifically—but others in the past two years.

Under the resolution the inquiry would cover sabotage and all other possible causes of fatal air accidents. The committee, or a subcommittee, also could recommend any needed improvement in safety devices.

Same Old Tale: American Loop Stars Win, 11-7

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

EBBETS FIELD, Brooklyn, N. Y., July 12.—As the guest of Baseball Commissioner Chandler, Attorney General Tom Clark was nominated to pitch out the first ball in the All-Star game. What with Federal anti-trust suits hanging over organized baseball, it was a shrewd pitching choice by Chandler.

More than 34,000 fans were in the stands by game time, and obviously the All-Star game was just about the biggest thing to happen in Brooklyn since Sunday afternoon when the Dodgers beat the Giants.

POVICH

This was the fans' dream game but none of 'em ever dreamed that the American League would be in front, 4-0, before the National League went to bat. To National League Manager Bill Southworth it must have felt like a hangover from the 1948 World Series.

Those four American League runs off Warren Spahn commenced with a bit of nonchalance by Eddie Kazak, the Cardinals' rookie third baseman. He nonchalantly fielded Kell's easy tap, nonchalantly threw to first base and nonchalantly pulled Johnny Mize off the bag. Whereupon Southworth glared at him un-nonchalantly.

IN A MANNER of speaking, you could say Spahn struck out the side in that first inning. He did fan three men, but it was a long time between strikeouts. On the scoreboard, a t'ree grew in Brooklyn, and then a 4.

Flash: 4-2. Stan Musial went into his little dance at the plate just before swinging at one of Mel Parnell's pitches, and after the ball was over—the right field wall—the National League had two runs. It was a nice loud homer, Musial to the ears of NL fans.

Manager Southworth had orders from NL President Ford Frick to win this game and when Spahn put two on base with one out in the second inning, Southworth decided to change pitchers. It wasn't a privately arrived-at decision. By that time, Frick was looking down Southworth's throat.

Parnell's out, too. That last hit finished him in the second inning. He hit Andy Seminick in the ribs to fill the bases with none out. Virgil Trucks of the Tigers walked into the pitching job at that point and held the NL to one run for the inning.

5-4, NATIONAL LEAGUE. There were plenty eyewitnesses to what hit Trucks in the third inning. Among the things he got hit with were his own wildness and singles by Mize and Kazak.

That lead didn't last the NL any longer than it took the American Leaguers to get to bat in the fourth. Newcombe pitched a single to Kell and a walk to Williams, and then Eddie Joost did a rewrite job on the score board figures. He hit a twisting single past Hodges to drive in two runs and move the AL in front, 6-5.

Eddie Kazak put the tying run on for the NL with a two-bagger off Brissie in the fifth, and then Lou Boudreau contemptuously ordered Campanella passed to put the potential winning run on base.

Whereupon Brissie struck out Pinch-hitter Andy Pafko in par figures, three pitches.

To that point, it wasn't a very thrilling rendition by the National League anyway. Before the third inning was over, they could already lay claim to having tied the All-Star series record of four errors by a single team in one game.

NOTHING ELSE happened to the National League until the sixth, and then Joe DiMaggio happened to 'em. Vern Bickford of the Braves was pitching when Dom DiMaggio led off with a two-bagger and Kell followed with a walk. There was some discussion about a change in pitchers and then Joe DiMaggio stuck in his oar . . . his double to center upped the AL lead to 8-5.

Rain held up the game for 11 minutes after the NL came to bat in the sixth, and then resumed play. Umpire-in-Chief Bill Summers wiped off the plate, and Home Run Hitter Ralph Kiner almost wiped out the NL's deficit with a two-run homer into the left field seats.

That disgusting situation was remedied by the AL against Howie Pollet in the seventh. Some Cleveland Indians, Joe Gordon and Dale Mitchell, got into the act with a brace of two-baggers and the upshot was an 11-7 lead for the Americanos.

That's the way it ended, and another All-Star game passed into the National League's sad history of its adventures in these things.

EDDIE COMES THROUGH—This was the scene at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, yesterday as Eddie Robinson of the Nats singled to right to score Joe DiMaggio with the American League All-Stars' second run of the first inning. Eddie Jost went on around to third base on the hit off Lefty Warren Spahn of the National League. Before the inning was over, Joost and Robinson had also scored and the Americans went on to an 11-7 victory

Musial, Kiner Hit Homers, But Nationals Err 5 Times

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Brooklyn, July 12.—The National League today appended a chapter to its sad misadventures in the All-Star games—an 11-7 shellacking by the American League before 32,477 Ebbets Field fans.

Belying their selection as hand-picked all-stars, the National Leaguers lapsed into a ragged performance that produced the record total of five errors by one team, in this loosest of all the 16 All-Star games.

Play-by-play details on Page 13.

They gave the American Leaguers four cheap, unearned runs on infield misplays by the Cardinals' Eddie Kazak and Brooklyn's Pee-wee Reese in the first inning, and that was the margin by which they suffered their twelfth defeat in 16 years.

Joost Twister Helps

And after they did rally to reclaim the lead at 5-4 in the third inning with the help of Stan Musial's two-run, first-inning homer their pitching couldn't contain the power in the A. L. bats.

The National League hit all of the day's home runs with Ralph Kiner of the Pirates blasting one of Lou Brissie's pitches for two runs in the sixth, but they couldn't manufacture runs with the speed their pitchers were giving them up.

It was a marathon that lasted 3 hours and 13 minutes with a brief time-out for rain that fell in the sixth. The 32,577 fans paid gate receipts of $79,225 into the players' pension fund.

Not the homers by Musial or Kiner but the mere single of Philadelphia's Eddie Joost was the most devastating hit of the day. It was a twisting single off Brooklyn's Don Newcomb, past first base and over the outstretched bare hand of Gil Hodges that Joost contributed, and it scored runners from second and third to wipe out the A. L.'s 5-4 deficit and put them in the lead in the fourth inning.

Manager Billy Southworth threw his entire staff of seven National League pitchers into the game in a vain attempt to pull it out. They were blasted for 13 hits, four of them doubles.

Virgil Trucks, one of the four A. L. hurlers of Manager Lou Boudreau, was credited with being the winning pitcher. He backed into the honor after relieving starter Mel Parnell. It was while Trucks was out of the game for a pinch hitter that the American League handed a 6-5 lead over to Brissie of the A's.

Newcombe was charged with the defeat. In vain, the National Leaguers backed their pitching with 12 hits.

Pollet Bombarded

Joe Di Maggio did not disappoint Joe Di Maggio fans. He drove in the first run of the ball game in the opening inning against Warren Spahn, and in the sixth when Brissie was nursing a mere 6-5 lead, Di Maggio gave him the comfort of a vicious two-run two-bagger to the center field wall.

Two-baggers by a pair of Cleveland Indians, Joe Gordon and Dale Mitchell highlighted a three-run uprising against the Cardinals' Howie Pollet in a seventh inning that virtually finished off the National Leaguers.

Lefthander Spahn, the N. L.'s starting pitcher, was the victim of a jittery infield in the opening inning plus his own ineffectiveness.

He fanned Dom DiMaggio to open the game, and then was done dirt when Kazak pulled Johnny Mize off the bag with a wide throw on Kell's soft grounder. Spahn slipped a third strike past Ted Williams, but Kell stole second on the pitch.

Joe DiMaggio didn't dally. He singled solidly to left to score Kell, and moved up when Joost drew a walk. Washington's Eddie Robinson blasted a single past Mize to score DiMaggio.

The damage appeared to be at an end when Michaels grounded to

Joe Di Mag's Bat Justifies His Selection

Brooklyn, July 12 (AP).—Jolting Joe DiMaggio carried his tingling comeback through the sixteenth All-Star game today as the American League ruffians pummeled their cousins from the National, 11-7, in Ebbets Field.

Big Joe D., picked for the team by Boudreau after he missed the first 65 games of the season with a sore heel, drove in three big runs that proved to be the clincher with a sixth-inning double and first-inning single.

Despite five errors by the Nationals in a poor performance that set an All-Star record for boots, it was touch and go until Joe DiMaggio's double off the left centerfield wall drove home two big runs in the sixth.

Joe, starting in place of the injured Tommy Henrich, stroked his big double in the sixth off Vern Bickford, the second pitcher from Southworth's own Boston club. Brother Dom DiMaggio opened the inning with a double to left and Kell walked.

Joe's 11th Appearance

The older Di Mag, on the All-Star for the eleventh time, caught hold of the pitch he had been waiting for all afternoon and hammered it against the wall in left center. Despite his aching heel, Joe roared into second base and took third when Catcher Roy Campanella of Brooklyn let the outfield throw bounce away from him.

That was the fifth error, and broke the record.

Joe Gordon, another old-timer at this All-Star business, belted a double off Pollet to start the seventh-inning splurge.

The American League didn't quite hit its all-time high in run production. That was back in 1946 at Boston when they shut out the Nationals, 12-0. But the two teams, scoring 18 runs, did break the old mark. Tops before this was the 9-7 score when the American League won in 1934.

Vic Raschi, the Yankees' 13-3 pitcher, finished up with three scoreless innings. He is the fellow who started and won last year at St. Louis, when he delivered a single with the bases full.

Of the seven National pitchers, only George Munger of St. Louis, Ewell Blackwell of Cincinnati and Preacher Roe of Brooklyn escaped unscathed. Each worked only one inning.

The loss, charged to Don Newcombe of the Dodgers (one of four Negro players to appear in an All-Star game for the first time, was nailed down in the seventh. Newcombe had long departed but the two runs he yielded in the fourth did the damage.

Nats Buy Gettel From Chicago; Haefner Rejects Semipros' Bid

Pitcher Allen Gettel, who couldn't lick the Nats in three starts this season, joined 'em yesterday as the Washington club shelled out the $10,000 waiver price to the Chicago White Sox.

Nats Owner Clark Griffith first said, "Yes," when asked last night if Gettel was purchased to replace the "fired" left-hander, Mickey Haefner. Then with a quick afterthought, Griff said, "Or you might consider Gettel an addition."

The Old Fox continued, "We are very short on pitchers, and the big fellow comes up with an excellent game every once in a while."

Once a most promising farmhand of the New York Yankees, the 6-foot 4-inch 200-pound Gettel has won only two games and lost six this year. He's worked in three games against the Nats, and was hit freely every time.

On May 3, when the Nats pounded out seven homers and beat the Chisox, 14-12, Gettel worked 1 1-3 innings in relief, giving up a homer to Clyde Vollmer, three other hits and three runs.

He started here on June 5 and lasted 2 1-3 innings. He was blasted for eight hits and left the game trailing, 3-1. The Sox came back to win, 5-4. He started again June 21 and was removed with nobody out in the fourth inning. He had allowed seven hits, hit one batter, walked another and was trailing, 4-0, and lost, 9-3.

In four previous years with the Yankees, Indians and Sox, Gettel beat the Nats five times and lost three.

He came up with the Yankees in 1944 after a spectacular season with Norfolk, Va., in the Piedmont League where he won 17, lost seven.

Jack, Giosa Try Again Here Tonight

Beau Jack and Eddie Giosa fight tonight at Griffith Stadium unless the rains play a return engagement and force a postponement like they did last night.

The two lightweights had scaled in, both at 139½, when the Liberty Athletic Club-sponsored card was called off. They both immediately went through light workouts.

Odds still favor Beau Jack, 8-5, but they're expected to shift toward young Giosa when his hometown rooters from Philadelphia arrive at ringside.

This will be Jack's first appearance here in 11 months. He kayoed Britain's Eric Boon in three rounds here about a month after losing his lightweight championship to Ike Williams. Beau has a six-fight winning streak locally.

An advance sale of $5000 is reported with Promoter Goldie Ahearn still predicting a gross of $20,000.

Rain Washes Out Trots at Laurel

Rain washed out harness racing at Laurel last night and the same card will be carried over until tonight. It's the fourteenth scheduled program and leaves Laurel only two more rain dates for its remaining seven nights of racing.

Robinson Plays Most of Game, Drives in Run

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 12.—Eddie Robinson, American League first baseman and lone representative of the Washington club in today's All-Star game, saw more action than any other member of the A. L. team.

Robinson played seven and one half innings before being replaced by Bill Goodman of the Red Sox.

He batted in a valuable run for the American League in the opening inning with a hot single to right that scored Joe DiMaggio from second base.

Maryland State Open Postponed Until Tuesday

Baltimore, July 12 (AP).—The Maryland State Open Golf Tournament was postponed for a week today when showers soaked the greens at the Country Club of Maryland.

Almost 100 entries were on hand for the 36-hole medal play test this morning and early threesomes teed off until about 9:30.

By this time the rains had soaked the greens and the course was deemed unplayable.

The tournament was rescheduled for next Tuesday, July 19, over the same course. Tournament managers said they would welcome additional entries in the meantime.

In 1947, the Yanks sent him, Gene Bearden and Hal Peck to Cleveland for Ray Mack and Sherman Lollar. That was his best year in the majors when he won 11 and lost 10. He moved to the White Sox last year with Pat Seerey in exchange for Bob Kennedy.

Meanwhile, it was reported by Associated Press that Haefner turned down an offer to become player-manager of the Winner, S. Dak., semipro team, where Cubs' Catcher Mickey Owen waited out his banishment from organized baseball.

Haefner wired Art Hayes, present manner of Winner, that he is "not available, but thanks."

The Nats were slated to work out this morning at 11 o'clock in Griffith Stadium, and entrain in the afternoon for Chicago where they open a three-game series Thursday night. Gettel will put on his first Washington uniform there.

Parker, Gonzales Head 16 Tennis Play Survivors

Chicago, July 12 (AP).—Heading a field of 16 survivors into tomorrows' third round of the National Clay Courts Tennis Tourney are top-seeded Pancho Gonzales and second-seeded Frank Parker, both of Los Angeles.

Gonzales, defending champion, dropped only seven games in four sets in eliminating Herbert Anger of Oshkosh, Wis., 6—0, 6—2, and Alex Hetzeck of Detroit, 6—3, 6—2.

Parker, a five-time clay courts champion, had less trouble. Fresh from his Spring Lake, N. J., win, he ousted Dick Moledous of New Orleans 6—1, 6—2, and then dropped only one game in the second round in trouncing Earle Theimer of Chicago 6—1, 6—0.

Ingling Receives Testimonial At Cup Regatta Luncheon

By Happy Walker

The President's Cup Regatta Association's monthly luncheon at the Willard Hotel yesterday was the scene of a fitting tribute to Clarence E. "Cap" Ingling, a charter member of the group.

Ingling, recently retired after 51 years as chief of the mail division at the White House, received the testimonial from Eric Greenleaf, General Regatta Chairman, who revealed that "Cap" Ingling was one of the original committee who called on President Calvin Coolidge, back in 1926, to secure the President's indorsement of the first President's Cup Regatta.

In accepting the testimonial and submitting his resignation as a member of the Regatta group, Ingling said, "Now that I am retired from the White House staff, I feel that I must forego any further active service in the regatta events." Ingling added, "I am proud to have contributed a small part to what is now the Nation's foremost aquatic festival, especially since the regatta had such a humble beginning 23 years ago."

President Edward C. Baltz, Honorary President John Remon and Vice President Edgar Morris, signators to the testimonial, warmly praised Ingling for his outstanding contribution, through the years, to the success of the regattas.

Chairman Greenleaf announced the appointment of Bernie Hardie to succeed Ingling as chairman of the Badge Committee. Charles W. Chapman, APBA official of New York was named referee of the Power events scheduled to take place on September 17 and 18. W. A. Rogers was named chief starter.

Jack Blank, trophy committee chairman, reported he had interviewed many of the Gold Cup drivers and owners, including Jack Schaffer, Guy Lombardo, Danny Arena and "Wild" Bill Cantrell, in Detroit last week all of whom indicated they planned to be on hand for the President's Cup classic.

Great Catch Didn't Hurt Ted's Rib

Joost's End-of-Bat Hit Big One—Lou

BROOKLYN, July 12.—Eddie Joost's fourth-inning single "was the turning point in the ball game," said Manager Lou Boudreau after his American League All-Stars had walloped the National Leaguers, 11-7 today.

"That was the break," the Cleveland pilot grinned, "That put us in front again and we went on from there."

Joost's crucial blow couldn't have had more English on it if he had shot it with a billiard cue. The ball landed in front of First Baseman Gil Hodges and took off at such a sharp angle the Dodger star attempted unsuccessfully to field it with his bare hand.

Coming with two out, it scored George Kell and Ted Williams and sent the American Leaguers back in front, 6-5. From then on, they never were behind.

"I hit the ball on the end of the bat," explained Joost, the Philadelphia shortstop, "the pitch was a slider, just call it a well placed single."

WHEN PRESIDENT Will Harridge of the American League pushed his way into the crowded dressing room to congratulate the pilot, Boudreau greeted him with "one for you, sir."

Williams said the leaping one-handed catch of Don Newcombe's long drive into the left field with the bases loaded in the second inning did not aggravate the rib injury which nearly kept him out of the game.

"The tape bothers me a little," said Williams, "but my side didn't hurt."

Ted naturally was disappointed that he went hitless.

"EVERY BALL THEY threw me seemed to be a slider or a sailer of some kind," he explained.

BOTH WILLIAMS and Joe DiMaggio, who listened to the late innings on the clubhouse radio, came off their chairs when Ralph Kiner poled his home run.

"I knew he was going to do that before the day was over," said Joe.

Dimaggio also pricked up his ears when brother Dom doubled in the seventh inning. It was only the second time that the two DiMaggios had played in the same outfield. Joe said he connected with a fast ball for his sixth-inning double.

Lou Brissie said Kiner blasted a fast pitch for a homer in the sixth.

"I got it too low," Brissie said. "I was trying to keep the ball high to him."

Over in the National League dressing room, Joost's freak single was about the only thing under discussion.

"It was the craziest thing I've ever seen," Manager Billy Southworth declared.

"THE DAMNED thing ruined us," chimed in Barney Shotton, the Brooklyn boss and a coach of the National Leaguers.

Gloom that settled over the losers' dressing room during the World Series or at crucial points in the season was lacking. But noboby was exactly happy about the beating.

Even Stan Musial, the leading hitter, wasn't satisfied.

"You had a good day, Stan," somebody told him.

"We lost didn't we," Stan replied. The Cardinal star reported he wasn't hurt in an eighth inning shakeup at second base, although he limped slightly while leaving the field.

AT CHARLESTOWN

DEAR FOLKS: Agent Pete Peterson, and Jockey Sammy Palumbo have come to a parting of the ways. Pete has been getting riding engagements for the veteran rider since 1945. Palumbo says he will get his own mounts and Peterson, who served several years overseas in the Army, plans to take the book of an apprentice rider when Cumberland opens on July 19. Since the return of Jockey Buddy Root to these parts Palumbo's crown as "king of the minor tracks" has been wobbling.

Hagerstown has served notice that no trainer with horses on the steward, veterinarian or starter lists will be given stalls at the meeting at that point, starting August 2. That would eliminate an army of horseflesh. Jockey Freddie Kratz says he will ride at Wheeling, starting July 30. BILL.

Pays $38.40, Valley Dream Is Second

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., July 12—B. S. Campbell's Quick Party, a son of Laugh Clown, gave the horse laugh to seven rivals here today and splashed to victory in the Shepherdstown Purse, featuring a rainy day at the races. Quick Party, neither quick nor a party to his last outing, having been beaten 23 lengths on a fast track, found the gooey going he likes and finished a length and a half in front of the closest opposition.

McKenny and Hickman's Valley Dream was second and a half length forward of M. I. Brooks' Sunny South. Quick Party, excellently handled by Francis Hanes, was clocked in 1:19 3/5 for the approximately six furlongs over the sloppy track and through rain that turned into something resembling a cloudburst after the race. Those who backed the winning 3-year-old collected at the rate of $38.40 for $2.

From a riding standpoint, the day's top honors went to Michael J. Knapp, a 35-year-old apprentice rider from Elmira, N. Y. He piloted three winners, including both ends of the daily double, which paid $94 on the four-and-seven combination. Knapp booted the Riva Farm's Saucy Boy home in the first race at a $16.40 mutuel and then came back to score with Mrs. N. L. Brown's Blue Smoke in the second race, the winning filly paying $11.80.

SIXTH INNING

AMERICANS—Pafko went into center field as Musial moved to right for the National League. Bickford went into pitch. D. DiMaggio doubled down the left-field line. Kell walked. Williams flied deep to Pafko. D. DiMaggio racing to third after the catch. Dillinger ran for Kell. J. DiMaggio doubled to left center, scoring Dom DiMaggio and Dillinger. J. DiMaggio took third when Kiner's throw got away from Campanella. The catcher was charged with an error. Doby ran for J. DiMaggio. S. Gordon threw out Stephens. Hodges scooped up E. Robinson's roller and stepped on first for the unassisted putout. Two runs, two hits, one error, one left.

NATIONALS—Dillinger replaced Kell at third base. Doby went into right, and D. DiMaggio switched to center in place of his brother, Joe. Reese walked. J. Robinson forced Reese. Dillinger to J. Gordon. The ump gives called time as the rain began to come down. The rain halted completely after 10 minutes and play was resumed. Mitchell was in left field. Musial tapped in front of the plate and was out, Berra to E. Robinson. Kiner clouted a home run in the lower left field stands, scoring J. Robinson ahead of him. Hodges beat out a hit down the third-base line. Thomson batted for Bickford and flied to Mitchell. Two runs, two hits, no errors, one left.

SEVENTH INNING

AMERICANS—J. Gordon doubled to right. Reese threw out Berra as J. Gordon held second. Wertz batted for Brissie and flied to Pafko who made a diving catch. J. Gordon holding second. D. Di Maggio singled to left, scoring J. Gordon. S. Gordon cut off Kiner's throw but threw high to J. Robinson at second as D. Di Maggio slid safely. Dillinger singled to left, scoring D. Di Maggio. Mitchell doubled to left center, Dillinger scoring. Hodges made a nice stop of Doby's grass cutter and flipped to Pollet for the out. Three runs, four hits, no errors, one left.

NATIONALS—Raschi went in to pitch. Wertz to right field, and Doby to center for the Americans. S. Gordon walked. Campanella popped to Stephens. Pafko walked. Reese popped to J. Gordon. Raschi made a gloved-hand stop of J. Robinson's bounder and whipped him out. No runs, no hits, no errors, two left.

EIGHTH INNING

AMERICANS — Blackwell became the sixth pitcher for the Nationals. Stephens was called out on strikes. Reese took E. Robinson's high fly. J. Gordon fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

NATIONALS—Goodman went to first base. Musial walked. Doby grabbed Kiner's low liner. J. Gordon allowed Hodges' fly to drop in front of him, then threw to first, but also late to get Hodges. Goodman, however, threw to Stephens at second to get Musial, who hesitated because he thought the ball would be caught. The play was ruled a fielder's choice. Slaughter batted for Blackwell and flied to Doby. No runs, no hits, no errors, one left.

NINTH INNING

AMERICANS—Roe pitched for the Nationals. Berra flied to Musial. Reese threw out Wertz. S. Gordon threw out Raschi. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Donkey-Baseball Game Slated Today at Bolling

Life in the Air Force continues at a merry clip though not always off into the wild blue yonder.

For instance, this morning at 11:30 at Bolling Air Force Base, the officers and enlisted men oppose each other in a jackass-softball game.

No gags, please, but there is a well-founded report that the officers' club is overstaffed with colonels and some of the cruder enlisted men are apt to make odious comparisons.

It's true the jackasses, and perhaps the colonels, will play an important part in the scheduled five-inning contest. Everyone is mounted except the battery and the batsman. Once the ball is hit, however, these three leap to their jackasses.

Capt. Bill Luckadoo hints that the balkiest jackasses will be reserved for the would-be baserunners.

Reese, but the Brooklyn shortstop fumbled the ball, and Joost scored from third. Birdie Tebbets got the fourth run home with a perfect hit-and-run single through short.

Parnell, too, ran into trouble in the first inning. Jackie Robinson whacked a long double to center with one out and then N. L. home run power asserted itself. Musial walloped a 3-and-2 pitch far over the right field wall to cut the A. L.'s 4-0 lead in half.

Parnell didn't last out the second. He filled the bases with none out on a walk to Marshall, a single by Kazak and a pitch into the ribs of Seminick. Trucks moved in, and only a superlative one-hand catch by Ted Williams in deep left robbed Pitcher Newcombe of an extra-base hit.

As it was, a run scored.

Then Peewee Reese, who went 0 for 5, cut short the would-be rally by grounding into a double play.

Came the third inning, and the N. L. went in front with two runs off Trucks. He was helped out temporarily by a double play after Robinson walked and Musial singled, but in succession Mize singled to right, Marshall walked, and Kazak singled to left for the second run of the inning.

That 5-4 lead lasted only until the A. L. could get to bat against Newcomb in the fourth. Kell singled, Williams walked, and with two out Joost hit the twisting single to right that got 'em both home.

George Munger took a turn on the mound for the N. L. in a scoreless fifth, but Vern Bickford of the Braves was touched up for two big runs in the sixth by Joe DiMaggio. After Brother Dom led off with a double past third and Kell walked, Giuseppe scored 'em both with a long two-bagger to left center, and raced to third when Catcher Roy Campanella couldn't find the throw to the plate.

Well, it was that DiMaggio bumped the A. L. into the 8-5 lead, because in their own sixth, the National Leaguers got tough with Brissie. Reese drew a walk, was forced by Ribinson, and then Kiner hit one, a fur piece into the left field stands for two runs.

That was almost the last gasp of the National Leaguers, Vic Raschi of the Yanks moved in at the start of the seventh. He was wild and put the tying runs on in the seventh, but the only hit he allowed in his three-inning turn was Parko's last-ditch single with two out in the ninth that availed nothing.

Meanwhile against Howie Pollet in their own seventh the American Leaguers rustled up three more runs, unneeded, but just in case.

6 From D. C. Advance to 2d Round

Three closely fought contests, not decided until the nineteenth hole, featured the first round of matches in the Maryland Women's State Championship at Manor Country Club yesterday. The field was narrowed to eight with local winners outnumbering the Baltimore entries, 6 to 2.

Heavy rains delayed the start until noon.

Mrs. Maurice Glick, Woodholme, defeated Mrs. Roderick Watson, Manor, 4 and 3. The defending champion had unexpected trouble with Mrs. Watson, who matched her game for the first nine holes. Then she won five straight holes on the back nine, and the match was over on 15.

Mrs. Charles Egenroad, Washington, scored a surprising upset in eliminating Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg, Baltimore Country Club, one of the most consistent winners in Maryland tournaments. Mrs. Egenroad's score of 81 was the lowest of the day, and gained a 6 and 5 victory over her opponent.

A close match between Mrs. J. P. Trouchaud, Kenwood, and Miss Elizabeth Bonthron, Hillendale, was won by the former one up in 19 holes. A par four to her opponent's 5 gave the match to Mrs.

SECOND FLIGHT RESULTS

Martino, D.C.'s Last Publinx Hope, Ousted

Los Angeles, Calif., July 12—Pat Martino of Washington was eliminated from the National Public Links golf championship here today in a ding-dong match in which he never was behind until the final green.

Six times during the second-round match Martino took a one-hole lead, and six times he lost it to Kenneth Oglesby of Tucson, Ariz. On the last hole, Oglesby dropped a two-foot putt after Pat missed a 12-footer and went ahead for the first time to win 1 up.

Martino, never more than one hole ahead of Oglesby, lost his match by approaching too short to the 17th and 18th greens.

Today's defeat of Martino and George Walter of Baltimore dropped the last of the five-man Washington-Baltimore area contingent from this twenty-fourth annual championship of the pay-for-play golfers.

Walter made a brilliant comeback to tie his match after being three down, but finally lost, 1 up, to James Caspio, stocky Cleveland slugger.

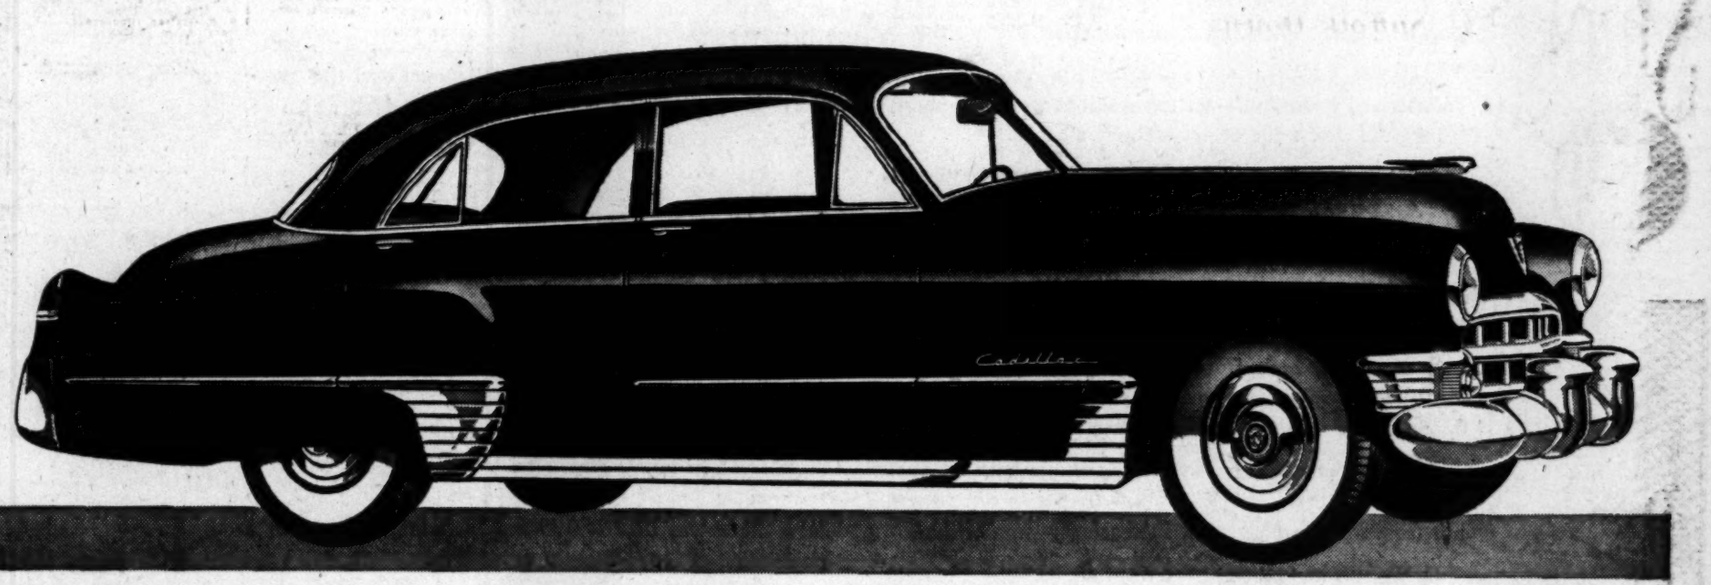
Why a Man Buys a Cadillac



If you were to ask the owner of a 1949 Cadillac why he bought his car, he would doubtless find it difficult to put into words the way he feels about "the Standard of the World".

He would probably tell you that he bought his car because it's a Cadillac.

Of course if you wanted to ask him specific questions, he could give you a great deal of specific information.

Did he buy his car for performance?

Why, surely he bought it for performance—for the 1949 Cadillac is powered by a great new V-8 engine, so smooth and effortless that only a demonstration can tell the whole story of its superiority.

Did he buy it for comfort?

Yes—for a ride so quiet and restful and easy that every mile is a joy and a relaxation.

Did he buy it for safety?

He certainly did! He has such confidence in the steady steering, the quick acceleration and the powerful hydraulic brakes that his peace of mind is worth the purchase price!

Did he buy it for long life and durability?

There can be no doubt of it. For he knows that many individual Cadillacs have rolled down the highways for more than half a million miles and are still in active service!

Did he buy it for.....?

Why, of course he did! And he bought it for a lot of other reasons: for beauty, for distinction, for quality, for background, for character, for craftsmanship, for engineering.

He bought it, you see, because it's a . . . Cadillac.

And that is the reason why you should buy one—for Cadillac's superiority lies not in any one thing but in the whole of its substance. Why not come in for a ride that's a revelation?

Isn't a hundred years long enough to prove a point?

BACK IN 1847, a German gent named Karl Marx, supported by the wealthy Friedrich Engels, wrote a book he called "The Communist Manifesto."

It was during the era the history books call the "Industrial Revolution"—when machines were beginning to take the strain and sweat off men's backs.

Marx, and the other prophets of doom, predicted that capitalism, under the machine age, would gobble up all the wealth, and leave the working man in a state of pitiful destitution unless all peoples of the world could be organized on a uniform socialistic basis.

And the big idea, mind you, was to attack capitalistic countries, bore from within, promote collectivist measures through governmental agencies, and defeat the opponent by turning his own strength against him.

Well—what's so different in principle between that and some of the monkey business that goes on today—not from outside alone, but increasingly from within.

We still have the opponents of capitalism—the only system on the face of the globe that gives the working man a fair break.

We still have those who argue against the profit and loss system—the one system in which men are free to take risks, grow, expand—and keep pace with the growing wants and needs of people.

And according to a recent study of excessive government spending, we are now having our lives and destinies planned by one thousand eight hundred and sixteen assorted government departments, bureaus, divisions and sections.

Now, let's have a look at how far we have come—and why—from the day of Karl Marx.

In 1850—animals and men did 70% of this nation's work. Machines—only 30%.

Crude implements were the rule. Backs bent under the strain. The work week was 70 hours and the average worker's output per hour bought 27 cents worth of goods and services, measured in present day buying power.

Today—a century later, animals and men do 6% of this nation's work. Machines—94%! The work week is 40 hours, and the average worker's output per hour buys $1.40 worth of goods and services, measured in today's buying power.

And here's the payoff—the answer to Karl Marx and all the little Marxes.

In 1850, with a population of 23,191,876, the number of gainfully employed was 7,700,000 including farmers, or 33.2% of the people. In October, 1948, the labor force was 60,134,000 not including farmers, in a population of 147,280,000 or 40.8%.

So it turns out that the machines men feared have been responsible for the biggest labor force, working the shortest hours, at the highest wages in world history.

And the ultimate answer to our great productive capacity and wage earning ability is that every American worker is backed by a capital investment twice to ten times that of the worker in other countries.

American Business now has plans to invest 40 billions in 1950-53. In new and better machines and equipment. In improved plants and processes. In expanding the opportunities for jobs.

Enough regulation and control of profits—enough meddling and master-minding—can stifle this program.

Isn't it about time that we put Karl Marx permanently into the moth balls? Or isn't a hundred years long enough to prove a point?

VA Layoff Notices Readied for 5000 Medical Employes

Layoff notices are in the works for from 5000 to 7000 employes in VA's hospital and medical operations. In addition, several thousand of the agency's administrative jobs also may have to be wiped out.

It now appears that the reductions will have to be made even though Congress gives the Veterans Administration the $24,400,000 additional voted by the Senate Appropriations Committee. This is VA's confused and complicated personnel picture:

As approved by the House, the VA budget would force the layoff of about 9000 additional administrative employes, and approximately 7000 people in hospital and medical work.

The Senate committee restored funds for about 8000 administrative jobs, mainly in VA's insurance operations. The hospital and medical program would get very little of the additional $24,400,000 allowed by the Senate committee. Hence, the pending cutback of its operations.

VA's insurance division plans to use a substantial part of the 20 million dollars earmarked for it to pay about 3000 temporary employes who are being hired to get out the GI insurance dividend. The more money it takes to finance that huge project, the less money will be available to pay VA's regular administrative employes. Hence a probable new slash in VA's administrative force.

VA's personnel setup is admittedly bewildering. So much so, in fact, that Administrator Carl Gray is being urged to write letters to congressional leaders to explain how and why the layoffs must be made unless the Senate increases the agency's budget.

Georgia L. Rusk, the former Democratic Congresswoman from New Mexico, is reported slated for a Federal job, perhaps as a member of the War Claims Commission . . . Civil Service Commission is losing one of its ablest employes, Ford W. Luikhart, who will go to Greece for ECA. Miller Sees 'Technique of Communism' In Virginia

Alexandria Voters Hear Candidate in Continued Attack On 'Byrd Machine'

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

The strategy of the "Byrd Machine" in Virginia is founded on the "technique of communism," Francis Pickens Miller, governorship candidate, charged last night.

He told 400 persons at George Washington School, Alexandria, that the "people of Virginia have seen the handwriting on the wall and judgment day is right around the corner."

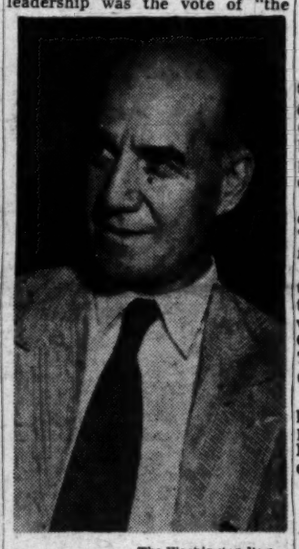
Continuing his attack on the State Democratic organization, he appealed to Eighth District voters to return "government to the people." Miller is an anti-organization candidate for the Democratic nomination in the August 2 primary election.

"The Byrd leadership has failed to make our Democratic system work because it distrusts the votes of the masses, makes an appeal to prejudice by inflaming farmers against workingmen, and it uses the lie as a political weapon," Miller charged.

These methods, Miller declared, constitute the "technique of communism."

"The Byrd machine wants to rule the people and not be responsive to the will of the people," he said.

The "straw that broke the camel's back" for the organization leadership was the vote of "the most powerful man in the Democratic Party in Virginia against the Marshall Plan," he declared in an apparent reference to Senator Harry F. Byrd.



The Washington Post
COL. FRANCIS P. MILLER
"Government to the people"

"That vote was counter to the wishes of 95 per cent of the voters in Virginia; it was like voting against the Declaration of Independence and the Monroe Doctrine."

He said the organization has proposed to kill the poll tax—"I'm for that"—but at the same time attempts to restrict voting further by requiring registration every year.

Miller will join two other candidates, Horace H. Edwards and Remie L. Arnold, on a radio broadcast sponsored by the Virginia Chamber of Commerce in Fredericksburg at 5:45 p.m. today.

State Senator John S. Battle, candidate of the State Democratic organization, will tour Greensville today, and appear at an Eighth District rally in Culpeper Thursday afternoon.

Opponents of Battle Attacked by Sen. Muse

Roanoke, Va., July 12 (AP).—Leonard G. Muse, former State Senator, tore into John Battle's opponents for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination tonight, and said charges that the Byrd organization holds Virginia in chains "are quite far-fetched."

In a radio address, the Roanoke attorney said Battle's reputation among his legislative colleagues is so great that whatever he recommends to the General Assembly will be carried out."

Muse said Francis Pickens Miller, antioorganization candidate, "declares that the people of Virginia are in slavery, and that if they want to be free, he is their only hope.

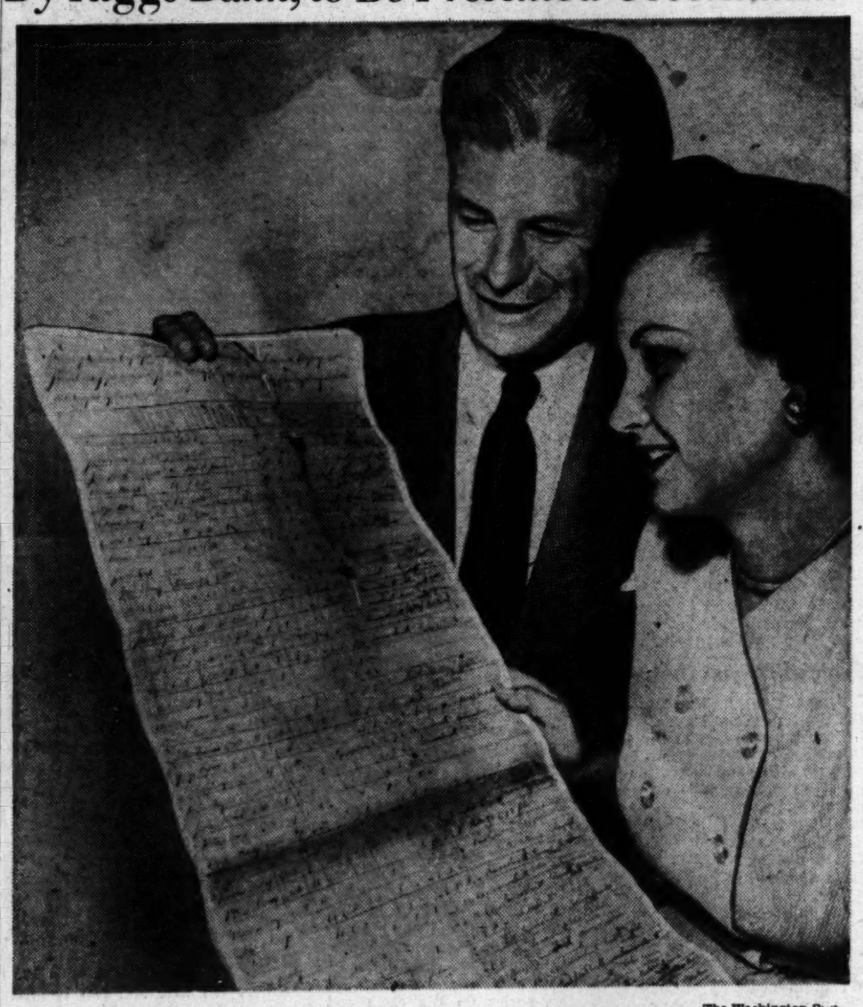
"Really," Muse said, "this is about the only promise he has made which has come to my attention."

Ouster of E. R. Combs Promised by Edwards

Richmond, Va., July 12 (AP).—Horace H. Edwards said tonight that if he is elected governor he will oust E. R. Combs as chairman of the State Compensation Board.

In an address over Station WRVA here, Edwards, a candidate for governor in the August Democratic primary, said "the board has fallen into bad repute all over the State, even to the extent that the things which it properly and rightfully does are viewed by thousands of Virginians with suspicion and distrust."

George Washington's Canal Payroll, Found By Riggs Bank, to Be Presented Government



The Washington Post

THE HISTORIC PAYROLL—Roland T. Carr, assistant vice president of the Riggs National Bank, and Mrs. Phyllis Oakes, secretary, look over the large, rag-paper document recording the pay of canal-construction workers of George Washington's Potowmack Company in 1792. The scroll was found in Riggs National Bank archives and will be given to the Government

By John London
Post Reporter

A quaint scroll which records the canal-construction payroll of George Washington's Potowmack Co. in the year 1792 has been found by Riggs National Bank and will be presented to the Government today.

The 4½-foot yellowed, rag-paper document records the pay of the 70-odd men who built a short skirting canal at Little Falls.

This was one of five canals built to skirt the Falls of the Potomac, then called the Potowmack, to provide a continuous waterway from Georgetown to Cumberland, Md. This canal system was the predecessor of the C. & O. Canal.

Washington was an unpaid president of the Potowmack company and did some of the preliminary surveying himself in a canoe.

Pay ranged from 1 pound 16 shillings a month for laborers to four pounds a month for overseers, and totaled 215 pounds, 1 shilling, 8½ pence, the scroll indicates.

Deductions ranged from "stealing a falling ax, 2.6", on the account of one Joseph Colliard, to 10 shillings subtracted from the account of Christopher Dugan, who died after 13 days on the job. The 10 shillings were for a coffin, and his widow, Mary, receipted for the balance due him with an X.

Many other accounts were similarly receipted in those days when education was a luxury.

The names are predominantly Irish—Burns, Kelly, Kilgalian, Dugan—some are English or Scotch—Evans, Sheridan, Crane. Four are Negroes—one listed as "Yellow George," property of William Wallises.

The scroll is of considerable historical value, according to T. S. Jett, National Capital Parks historian. It will be housed in the museum to be built in the remodeled old tavern at Great Falls where documents relating to the C. & O. Canal will be displayed.

The find was made by Roland T. Carr, assistant Riggs vice president. He has been unearthing a series of documents buried in Riggs archives as the basis of an advertising campaign.

He discovered it in an old box at the Farmers and Mechanics Branch, founded in 1814 and a separate bank until 1836. He speculates that it may have been stored there because the project overseer, James Smith, may have been related to the bank's first cashier, Clement Smith.

Robert V. Fleming, president and chairman of the board of Riggs, will present the scroll to Interior Secretary Julius Krug, at 12:45 p. m. today in the secretary's office.

PUC Approves Tuck's Offer To Run Buses

District Public Utilities Commission and Peoples' Counsel John O'Dea yesterday advised the D. C. Commissioners to ask Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia to continue bus service between nearby Virginia and Washington in case a proposed strike takes place.

The city heads took the matter under advisement and asked Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West to investigate the legal angles of such a request.

Drivers of the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington bus line have announced they will call a strike on July 21 if wage negotiations are not successfully completed. Governor Tuck has the authority to seize control of the line and operate it if the strike takes place. He asked the Commissioners if they desired him to do so.

The Public Utilities Commission said such service was essential for the transportation of thousands of employes of the Pentagon and other defense agencies in nearby Virginia.

Prince Georges Schools Boost Tuition for District Students

Tuition fees for District children attending Prince Georges County schools were fixed yesterday by the County Board of Education to conform with increased nonresident tuitions set recently in the District.

Also the Montgomery County Board of Education decided that the District Welfare Board, beginning next fall, must pay two thirds of the tuition of school-age children it places in Montgomery County foster homes.

The Prince Georges County action means high-school students from the District must pay $255 tuition yearly, junior high students, $192, and elementary school students, $122.

District children residing in foster homes in the county will be charged half the regular rate.

Funds will be available to appoint teachers in 14 elementary schools to relieve principals from teaching duties if the move is approved by the county commissioners, the Prince Georges school board said.

State funds allocated to the county schools will amount to more than had been anticipated, Superintndent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart said.

The commissioners had previously allocated slot-machine revenues for this purpose but Circuit Judge Charles C. Marbury ruled the slot-machine law invalid. The added teachers will cost $32,000.

The Montgomery County Board of Education decision on tuition of District children placed in foster homes in the county was reached at a regular meeting yesterday.

The school body acted on a query from the welfare board, which noted that Prince Georges County already is requiring such tuition payments, and asked Montgomery to take action in the matter.

John N. Torvestad was elected mayor of Colmar Manor, Md., last night for his eighth consecutive term.

Torvestad, unopposed, polled 38 votes. Olin L. Merchant received 13 write-in votes, while Joseph Terenvi, former councilman, polled 11 write-ins, and J. Paul Ward, jr., received one write-in vote.

Joseph E. Slaughter, first ward, was reelected to the council with 15 votes. Councilman Andrew H. Tackitt, third ward, also was reelected with 5 votes. Both were unopposed.

Policeman Lends Stork a Hand, Delivers Wife's Fourth Baby

Police Private Miles J. Richey had planned on being a parent, but he hadn't planned on delivering the baby. But that's the way it happened.

Richey

Richey, who is 26, was awakened by his wife, Lois, 22, at about 1 a. m. yesterday in their apartment at 223 O st. sw. The stork was due at any moment, she told him.

Richey tried to reach their doctor by telephone. He wasn't available.

When the baby arrived, the policeman very calmly did all the necessary things. He gave the infant a sharp slap on the back and it started to breath.

With the critical stage past, Richey began to sweat. He ran downstairs and summoned Mrs. Frieda Pascal, Planned Parenthood Association nurse, and Mrs. Joseph Walters, whose husband is a policeman with Richey at the Fourth Precinct.

There wasn't much for them to do. Later, mother and child (it was a 5-pound, 10-ounce girl) were removed to Columbia Hospital where both were reported doing well late yesterday.

It was the fourth daughter for Private and Mrs. Richey. Their other children are Charlotte, 5, Mary, 3, and Frances, 2.

During the last war, Richey said, he was a technical sergeant with the Air Force and while in North Africa assisted his flight surgeon in helping native women give birth to children.

2 Surveyors Mark Site of Bay Killing

Maryland Officials Say Result Proves Crabber Was Shot Within That State

Crisfield, Md., July 12 (AP). Surveyors marked off a narrow Chesapeake Bay strait today—and afterward two Maryland officials still held that crabber Earl Nelson was killed in the waters of their State.

Nelson was shot a week ago today as David Acree, special deputy for the Virginia Tidewaters Commission, sought to arrest him on a charge of illegally crabbing in Virginia waters. Acree said the shooting was accidental.

Virginia officials contended the shooting took place well within their State. Maryland eyewitnesses said Nelson was in his own State when Acree stepped from a conservation patrol plane and into his boat.

Both States swore out murder warrants against Acree. Today's survey will go a long way towards whether Maryland or Virginia will bring him to trial.

The shooting scene was in Cedar Straits. It is just 100 yards wide and the State line runs down its middle. Watkins Point, Md., is on one side and Green Harbor, Va., on the other.

Two engineers made the survey—George Badger of Virginia and John Widener of Maryland.

They placed a tall stake on which a white flag was mounted in the middle of the shallow straits as Gov. William Preston Lane, jr. and 10 other Maryland officials looked on.

Police Chief Albert Rich of Crisfield and Trial Magistrate Marvin Tawes of Crisfield were in the party. They had been to the spot the day of the shooting and had questioned 15 Maryland fishermen eyewitnesses.

Both said that from what the witnesses had told them, the white flag border marker showed the shooting took place 25 or so yards north of the border line in Maryland.

They said they could recall within three or four feet of where it had been testified the shooting took place. When asked how they could pinpoint the scene so sharply on open waters, they explained that the straits are so narrow it was easy to mark a location.

The water is only four or five feet deep there and land is a stone's throw from either side.

Lane said the jurisdictional problem should be settled by the end of the week. No formal decision was made today.

After 32 Years

Bank Guard Makes His First Arrest

After 32 years as a special officer at the Munsey Trust Co., 1329 E st. nw., William H. Day believes he has at least graduated from the status of a "rookie": He made his first arrest yesterday after a half-block chase.

Day arrested and turned over to Metropolitan Police a man who tried to cash a phony counter check for $65 under the name of John R. Young.

The teller, Mrs. Marguerite Altman, 26, 4027 Beecher st. nw., didn't recognize the customer or signature. She checked the name in her card files, found no such account.

When she turned back to the cage window, the man was "casually strolling out of the bank."

Mrs. Altman summoned Day, the guard. They rushed into the street where they spotted the man at 13th and E sts. nw.

When Day asked the man about the incident, he replied: "Well, maybe I made a mistake and went to the wrong bank."

"That was enough for me," Day later said. "I made my first arrest."

On Vacation

ICC Aide Killed in Collision

Miss Frances Streator, 50, of 705 Roeder rd., Silver Spring, Md., an employe of the Interstate Commerce Commission here, was killed in an automobile-truck collision yesterday near Chenoa, Ill., the Associated Press reported.

Three women companions, including Mrs. Marguerite McGinty, 53, of 900 19th st. nw., also an ICC employe, were injured. The foursome were returning to Washington from a month-long tour of the West Coast when the accident occurred.

Miss Streator, employed in the I..C..C.'s Bureau of Safety, lived with her sister, Mrs. Arly T. Caudill. Mrs. McGinty is an accountant.

The car belonged to New York friends of Miss Streator. They were identified as Mrs. Ida Mohr, Hartford Terrace, and Mrs. Rose Hall, 59, New Hartford. The four left Washington June 3. All were taken to a hospital at Bloomington, Ill.

Stephen Turner, 5, of 821 3d st. nw., was struck by an auto at about noon yesterday when he ran out from between parked cars in front of his home.

The child is in Casualty Hospital in undetermined condition with a possible skull fracture, and an injury to the right knee.

Widmer

Pvt. William B. Widmer, 27, a motorcycle policeman, was involved in a collision with a truck at 1:50 p.m. at 7th st. and Florida ave. ne.

Widmer, who lives at 1835 3d st. ne., was admitted to Emergency Hospital with back and hand injuries.

Police charged the truck driver, Charles H. Hye, 42 of 1126 7th st. ne., with failing to yield the right of way to another vehicle.

Two persons were injured at about 7 a. m. when a bus skidded and crashed into a light pole on Benning rd. ne.

Admitted to Casualty Hospital were the bus driver, Clarence C. Clark, 44, of 1205 Rhode Island ave. nw., who had a fractured left leg, and his lone passenger, Lillian Slaughter, 53, of 843 19th st. ne., who suffered a possible concussion.

Court Rules McLean Rents May Be Raised

The Municipal Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that the Rent Control Administrator erred in dismissing a petition for a $5 monthly rent increase on 1173 units of McLean Gardens here.

In opening the way for the Fairmac Corp., operator of the development, to seek the increase, the court ruled that the rent schedules now in effect there are due to "peculiar circumstances" and should be reviewed.

Involved in the case are nine three-story residence halls. Six buildings are occupied by women and three by men.

Fairmac's attorneys, John J. Wilson and Roger J. Whiteford, told the court that the buildings were constructed for the Defense Homes Corporation to aid the war effort and that the original rents, which are still in effect, were fixed to fit the pocketbooks of prospective tenants with comparatively modest earnings. They were not arranged so as to obtain a fair return on the investment, the lawyers said.

In 1947, Fairmac took over and last year asked for the rent increase.

In an opinion by Judge Andrew M. Hood, it is stated that the transaction by which the rents were set "was not one where the landlord intended to secure to itself the greatest possible economic benefit. In fixing the rents factors were present which prevented a bargaining valuation of the property for rental purposes under the then existing market conditions."

The case was sent back to the Rent Control Administrator to decide whether the rent is today substantially lower than rent generally prevailing for comparable housing accommodations. If found to be lower, a rent increase would be in order, it was indicated.

Rains Flood Maryland, W. Virginia Rails, Roads

Trains Detoured; D. C. Area Gets Good Drenching; More Due Today

Torrential rains caused flash floods in many sections of Maryland and West Virginia last night and Washington got its drenching too.

The one and a half inches of rain that fell here did little to relieve the oppressive humidity.

More showers are expected today, which will be warm and humid, the Weather Bureau predicted.

High today should be about 88, five degrees warmer than yesterday's high of 83, at 3:56 p.m. Low was 72 at 6:15 a.m.

The flash floods in Maryland and West Virginia last night snarled railroad traffic into Washington. Several trains were delayed and some passengers had to travel part of the way by bus.

A stretch of Baltimore and Ohio Railroad track 45 miles west of Cumberland was submerged by three feet of water and was completely impassable, officials at Union Station said.

One train Washington-bound from St. Louis and Chicago was held up at Altamont, W. Va. Its passengers were taken overland by bus to Cumberland where they boarded another train and continued their trip. Westbound B & O trains were detoured northwest around the flooded area.

An incoming Pensylvania Railroad train from Chicago and St. Louis, due here at 6:10 p. m., arrived two hours late after it was forced to slow its speed over submerged track near Parkton, Md., about 20 miles north of Baltimore. Later trains traversing the same route averaged delays of a half hour.

Yesterday's intermittent showers, which started here at 2:52 a.m., brought relief to parched land but most crops still needed a soaking rain.

Crop observers said the rains came in the nick of time. Many crops were in critical need of moisture after the drought which extended for 30 to 50 days in some sections.

Gusts of wind ranging up to 27 miles an hour in the morning, coupled with rain, knocked two high-tension wires out of service, depriving some residents of electricity for up to 25 minutes.

A falling tree limb knocked down a wire at Wisconsin ave. and Harrison st. nw. at 11:23 a. m. Pepco reported lights were out for about a mile along the north side of Western ave. nw., for 25 minutes.

Another wire was down at 10 a. m. at 5th and Taylor sts. nw., depriving residents within an eight-block radius of lights for a short time.

A tree fell and knocked down an iron fence at 1000 N st. nw. at 11:45 a. m. Cora Rozzle reported the tree broke a window in her basement apartment.

3 Insurance Law Revisions Clear Hurdle

Three bills to revise the District's insurance laws were approved yesterday by the House District subcommittee headed by Representative Kennedy (D., Mass.).

The bills would modernize sections of the District law covering group and industrial life insurance, and would permit insurance companies here to invest in obligations of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Also approved was a bill to permit trust accounts to be grouped into common trust funds for improved investment.

The subcommittee deferred action on a bill to increase from $50 to $300 the amount of unsecured loans that can be made by local credit unions operating under District law. Approval of the bill was urged by several witnesses representing credit unions.

Woman Sent to Jail for Posing 8 Months as Hospital Nurse

A 22-year-old woman who served eight months at Sibley Hospital by falsely representing herself as a graduate nurse was sentenced yesterday to 60 days in jail.

She is Miss Helen Frances Toller, 22, of Silver Hill, Md.

The sentence, maximum allowed for the offense, was imposed by Judge Ellen K. Raedy of Municipal Court.

Miss Toller studied practical nursing at another hospital, police said, and worked for two physicians before going to Sibley last October.

Using an allegedly stolen registered nurses identification card, she applied for work and was assigned to general floor duty.

Her work, according to Dr. John Orem of the hospital, was satisfactory and there were no complaints.

Among her duties, police related, were hypodermic injections and intravenous feedings.

"The remarkable thing about it is how she managed it," Dr. Oren said. "She must be very bright."

She was trapped after she used the identification card to open charge accounts here and a discrepancy in addresses was traced to her.

Miss Toller was quoted as saying that she has always loved nursing and has read every book on the subject she could find.

Judge Raedy said the defendant had been in trouble on several occasions previously and was not a good probation risk. A fine was inadvisable. Judge Raedy said, because it would be punishment only for Miss Toller's family who would have to pay it.

Correspondents Killed in Plane Crash Widely Known Here

Most of the newsmen killed in the plane crash in India yesterday had worked or visited here at one time or another. Two of the dead were Washington residents; two others were Pulitzer prize winners who had filed stories here on occasion.

These are the newsmen whose lives were lost:

Nat A. Barrows

Nat A. Barrows, 49, foreign and war correspondent for the Chicago Daily News since 1941.

A native of Rochester, Mass, Mr. Barrows was on the staff of the Boston Globe before joining the Daily News. Since the war he had covered the United Nations. He was cited last May by Sigma Delta Chi, national journalism society, for outstanding foreign coverage.

Barrows

The society specified his stories on the Russian aerial supply line to Israel

As a Globe reporter, Mr. Barrows covered the sinking of the submarine Squalus. Later he wrote a book about it—"Blow All Ballast." He covered South America extensively after joining the Daily News. During the war, he served as European correspondent.

Mr. Barrows leaves his wife, Dorothea Whittier Barrows, a landscape artist, of Flushing, N. Y., and their 3-year-old son.

James Branyan

James Branyan, 31, reporter for the Houston (Tex.) Post.

Branyan, youngest of the fatally injured newsmen, was born in New Albany, Miss., and began his journalistic career in 1939 on the Atlanta Georgian.

Branyan

He later transferred to the International News Service in Atlanta.

He spent five years in uniform, emerging after the war as a captain after serving in a Chemical Warfare unit in England.

Mr. Branyan returned to the INS after the war, went from there to the Beaumont Journal, and then to the Houston Post, for which he was a general assignment reporter.

Fred Colvig

A native of Oregon, he was graduated from the University of Oregon in 1936 as a Phi Beta Kappa. Upon graduation, he worked for the United Press for a year and then became a reporter for the Portland Oregonian. He subsequently became its assistant Sunday editor.

Colvig

Mr. Colvig broke off his news career to join the Navy when war came. He served as an air intelligence officer on a carrier in the Pacific.

Stationed here in 1945 and early 1946, he was editor of All Hands Magazine, published by the Navy Bureau of Personnel. He lived at Shirley Homes, South Arlington, during that time.

Mr. Colvig leaves his wife, Mrs. Mary B. Colvig, and four children, of Denver.

Miss Elsie Dick

Miss Elsie Dick, director of women's religious and educational programs for the Mutual Broadcasting System.

A native of New York, Miss Dick began her news and radio career with The New Yorker magazine as head of its art department. She also had been an associate editor of House Beautiful Magazine.

Miss Dick

Miss Dick joined Mutual seven years ago. An official of the system here said she was the originator of the documentary type of radio program. Her latest, "The Atom and You," was a four-broadcast series on the atom and its relationship to man.

Thomas A. Falco

Thomas A. Falco, 39, European expert for Business Week, one of the two Washingtonians killed in the crash.

Falco

Falco was born in New York and, after attending night school, took a bachelor's degree in Business Administration from the College of the City of New York in 1933.

He entered the brokerage business after graduation, later began his news career with the Financial World publication there. After some three years, he came to Washington to work for the War Productions Board. He served with the WPB until July, 1945, as associate editor of a confidential publication.

Mr. Falco then joined the Washington bureau of Business Week. He resigned in 1946 to spend a year and a half as a member of the economic staff of the American Military Government in Berlin.

Falco married a German girl about two years ago when he was associated in a civilian capacity with Maj. Gen. William H. Draper, then economic adviser to United States Military Government authorities.

Upon returning here in July, 1947, he rejoined Business Week. An expert on European affairs, and a student of the Economic Cooperation Administration, he wrote State Department news for the magazine. He was a member of the National Press Club and the White House Correspondents Association.

Falco leaves his wife, Mrs. Annaliese Falco, of 2804 Naylor rd. se., his mother, Mrs. Mary Falco, of the same address, and three brothers. They are Henry E., of 1735 33d pl. se., George of New York, and Nicholas Falco of Dumont, N. J.

Charles Gratke

Charles Gratke, 48, foreign editor of the Christian Science Monitor since 1937.

A veteran foreign correspondent, Mr. Gratke bore the scars of the rise of Hitler's legions. A spokesman for the Christian Science Monitor here said he was beaten and scarred by the Nazis in the early '30s, creating an international incident, while covering Berlin for the Monitor.

Gratke

After that episode, he was sent to London, where he became European editorial manager for the paper. He returned to the United States to take the place of foreign editor.

Gratke began his newspaper career in Oregon, where he worked on his father's paper, the Astoria Evening Budget. He also reported for the Oregon City Enterprise, the Portland Oregonian and the Detroit News. He switched to the Monitor in 1927, had been with it ever since.

After his return to Boston he made repeated trips abroad. In 1943 he was one of five guests of the Swedish government through special arrangement with the State Department.

In April and May, 1946, he surveyed Germany under the occupation—an enterprise which won him the Sigma Delta Chi award for foreign correspondence that year. He also held France's "Medaille de la Reconnaissance Francaise" for his organization of the Monitor's coverage during the Nazi occupation.

With his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Whitehouse Gratke, who survives, he lived in Marblehead, a suburb of Boston.

S. Burton Heath

S. Burton Heath, 50, Pulitzer Prize winner, was roving correspondent for the Newspaper Enterprise Association.

Heath

Mr. Heath, a native of Lynn, Mass., was graduated from the University of Vermont in 1926. He began his career as an apprentice printer on the Bradford (Vt.) Opinion in 1913, was editor and later owner of the Groton (Vt.) Times from 1917 to 1921.

A reporter for the Associated Press in 1926-28, he transferred to the New York Telegram in 1928. Two years later he served for a year as secretary of the St. Lawrence Power Development Commission. He became a reporter for the New York World-Telegram in 1932.

It was with that paper, in 1939, that Heath won a Pulitzer Prize for an expose which resulted in the resignation and conviction of Judge Martin T. Manton of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Manton died in 1946.

Mr. Heath joined the McClure Newspaper Syndicate in 1941, and changed to NEA the following year.

A veteran of World War I, he was wounded twice while serving with the Twenty-Sixth Division.

As roving correspondent for NEA, Mr. Heath had on many occasions filed stories out of Washington, the bureau here said. He was widely read in his annual income tax columns, which he wrote as a guide to the Nation's taxpayers.

He covered the Bikini atom bomb tests and had reported for the NEA from the Belgian Congo, from Germany and other parts of the world. He kept an air log of his travels and was an expert on aviation.

His home was in Darien, Conn., where his wife and two children live.

Bertram Dyer Hulen

Bertram Dyer Hulen, 60, the other deceased Washingtonian, was dean in point of service, of reporters covering the State Department beat. He was a long time member of the New York Times Washington Staff.

Hulen

Born in Cliftonville, Mass., he was graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Tufts College in 1911 and later attended Harvard Law School.

An employe of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican from 1913 to 1918, he joined the Boston bureau of the Associated Press the latter year. He came to Washington with the AP in 1920, and transferred to the New York Times six years later.

Mr. Hulen covered Calvin Coolidge's presidential campaign in 1924, winning the President-to-be's friendship in the process. Over the years on the State Department beat, he also counted among his friends Charles Evans Hughes, Cordell Hull, and other high officials.

His hobby, according to Luther Huston, manager of the Times bureau, was his dog, a large Siberian husky. It was his custom to walk the dog in Rock Creek Park, where, Huston said, he would meet and chat with Secretary of State Acheson and Supreme Court Justice Frankfurter.

Nearly ten years ago, Mr. Hulen condensed his long experince into a book titled: "Inside the Department of State." It became a textbook on the department's activities and the formation of foreign policy, Huston said.

He also taught a course in current events at St. Albans School for Boys. He was in Bogota, Colombia, last year, covering the Inter-American Economic Conference for the Times, when the revolt occurred.

Mr. Hulen's only survivor is his wife, Mrs. Katherine Hulen, with whom he lived at 3020 Dumbarton ave. nw. She was at their summer home in Ashfield, Mass., when the crash took place.

H. R. Knickerbocker

H. R. ("Red") Knickerbocker, Pulitzer prize winner, was a foreign correspondent, lecturer and radio commentator.

Knickerbocker

Mr. Knickerbocker, 51, won a Pulitzer prize in 1930 for a series of stories on "Fighting the Red Trade Menace." He was a specialist in Central Europe and Russia.

Born in Yoakum, Tex., he took a bachelor of arts degree from Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex., in 1917 and broke into newspapering in 1920 on the Newark Morning Ledger.

After working on the New York Sun and, in 1922-23, serving as head of Southern Methodist University's journalism department, he began his long overseas career as assistant Berlin correspondent for the New York Evening Post and Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Through the years, he covered the Abyssinian War, the Spanish Civil War, the Sino-Japanese War in 1937, and World War II. In the late war, he reported the fighting in all major theaters as chief foreign correspondent for the Chicago Sun.

Mr. Knickerbocker covered the State Department and the White House for a brief period in 1942 while between overseas assignments for the Sun. But, added Bascom Timmons, his former boss here, "I don't think he had a permanent domestic assignment for 20 or 25 years."

Mr. Knickerbocker, since leaving the Sun in 1945, had been broadcasting and lecturing. He covered the Hiss trial in New York for Station WOR, the Sun office here said.

He leaves his second wife, Agnes; a son, Conrad, a senior at Harvard University and an employe of the Chicago Daily News; and three daughters, Julia, Myranda and Suzy. The family home is at Nyack, N. Y.

Lynn C. Mahan

Lynn C. Mahan, 40, was vice president of the public relations firm of Swanson and Co., of New York, which handles publicity for the Netherlands government. Mr. Mahan made arrangements for the flight and accompanied the newsmen.

A native of Hopkins, Mo., and a graduate of the University of Missouri journalism school, he had a brief whirl at newspapering, but for several years had been in public relations work.

Mr. Mahan served as a major in the war, holding the post of chief of public relations for the North Atlantic wing of the Air Transport Command. He was stationed here for some time in the war, and had a large acquaintanceship among news and radio men here and in New York.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Mahan, and two children.

Vincent Mahoney

Mahoney

Born in Dublin, Ga., Mahoney was a graduate of Georgetown University, after which he entered the newspaper field. He worked successively for the Associated Press, United Press, Los Angeles News and Time, Inc., before the war.

From 1941 to 1945, he was chief of the bureau of intelligence of the Office of War Information for the Pacific theater. His job was to analyze and evaluate propaganda broadcasts.

Mr. Mahoney joined the Chronicle in April, 1945, as an editorial writer. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Virginia Mahoney, and two sons, of San Francisco.

George L. Moorad

Moorad

Born in Portland, he was a graduate of the University of Oregon (1930) and had studied at Northwestern College of Law. He went to China and worked on the China Press and the Shanghai Times.

He reported for these papers during the Sino-Japanese War and also was full-time correspondent for Time and Life in that area. He returned to the United States in 1937 to become news editor of the Santa Cruz (Calif.) Sentinel.

Moorad accepted the post of Pacific area director of public relations for the American Red Cross in 1941, but went back to news work with the bombing of Pearl Harbor. He covered the Guadalcanal landings for the Saturday Evening Post and then followed the Thirty-Second and Forty-First Divisions in New Guinea for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

After that, he covered the war almost around the globe. He was back in Manchuria in 1946 when Russian trouble threatened. He also reported the atomic bomb tests from Kwajalein Island. He joined the staff of Station KGW in 1946.

Mr. Moorad was author of a book on Russia—"Behind the Iron Curtain." Another, on China, has been accepted for publication.

William C. Newton

William C. Newton, 37, well-known to many Washington newsmen, was a reporter for Scripps-Howard, all his 15 years in the newspaper business.

Newton

Mr. Newton is remembered for uncovring graft in the Ohio State administration while working with the Columbus Bureau of Scripps-Howard in pre-war days.

A native of Columbus, he entered the bureau there in 1934, after graduation from Ohio State University. After Pearl Harbor, he joined the Air Force, emerging as a captain. He served in the European Theater and China as an aerial gunner.

He received his discharge from the service in Chungking, and immediately rejoined Scripps-Howard, spending the following 18 months in China as a foreign correspondent, and then a year in Europe.

Mr. Newton was between foreign assignments early in 1948, and worked in Washington from January until April. While here, he watched the State Department and Congress, filing stories particularly on China.

His wife, Nelle, and daughter, Sally, 9, live in Columbus.

John Werkley

John Werkley, 36, reported here for the New York Herald Tribune until last October, when he took a writing job with Time, Inc., in its New York office.

In addition to the Herald Tribune and Time, he had worked for the Paterson Evening News, the Associated Press in Columbia and Kansas City, Mo., and the Daily Oklahoman in Oklahoma City.

He left the Daily Oklahoman at the outbreak of the war to enter the Navy. Along Our Street with Aunt Penny

A Long Distance telephone call from someone in the family who's away from home usually means a great deal. So I understand how excited Mrs. Sholl must have been to hear from her boy, Don, who's in the Army. She told me he called from San Francisco this morning and that he'd be home on furlough next month.

I was so happy for her I didn't stop to think that I had been using the telephone a lot during the morning, making arrangements for the coming church festival. If I'd been on the line when Don called, he wouldn't have gotten through because Mrs. Sholl and I share the same telephone party line.

It made me realize how important it is for party-line neighbors to use their telephone service "sharingly." Next time I have to call a number of people, I'll certainly allow some time between calls so that others on the line have a chance to make and receive calls too.

Bug Killer Aids Victims of Rare Muscle Malady

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Use of a common insecticide as a medicine against myasthenia gravis, rare but deadly muscle ailment, has been reported by two Johns Hopkins physicians.

The bug killer, tetraethyl pyrophosphate, gives four to six times longer lasting relief than present drug therapy for the stricken, reported Drs. David Grob and A. McGehee Harvey.

Importance of this, they observed, is that it carries the patient through the night sleeps whereas benefits of the present sole drug, prostigmine, wear out in three to four hours.

May Aid Muscle-Nerve Study

But even more important than the finding of a better drug, they reported, may be its use for study in muscle-nerve physiology. A better understanding of this body mechanism is needed to solve many ills, including infantile paralysis.

Myasthenia gravis—literally severe muscle weakness—most frequently attacks muscles of the throat, chest and face. The patient loses the ability to swallow and to breathe, and death may occur within a few weeks after onset, or be held off as long as 10 to 15 years.

The little-known malady, of mystery source, knows no age limit. It is more frequently noted, however, in age groups of early adult life and past middle age. Doctors estimate that a city the size of Washington has anywhere from 15 to 25 cases at any one time.

Used Like Insulin

Until 1935 and the discovery of prostigmine, doctors could do nothing to even temporarily restore activity to the affected muscles. Now tetraethyl pyrophosphate, or TEPP as it is called, can be used to restore muscle strength for 12 to 24 hours, Drs. Grob and Harvey reported in the latest Bulletin of the Johns Hopkins Hospital. Like prostigmine, the insecticide drug can be taken orally or by injection in daily, insulin-like routine, they reported.

The doctors' investigations were carried out and are being continued under a contract between the Medical Division, Chemical Corps, United States Army, and Johns Hopkins University.

$112 Million More Okayed For Veterans

Increases totaling $112,597,000 a year in benefits to disabled war veterans and their dependents were approved yesterday by the House Veterans Committee.

The Veterans Administration estimated the first-year cost at $84,432,000.

This increase averages about 8.7 per cent. Veterans' organizations originally asked a 25 per cent increase in compensation and dependency figures to offset higher living costs.

Under the new schedule, the rate of compensation ranges from $15 a month for 10 per cent disability up to $150 a month for total disability. Totally disabled veterans now get $138.

The committee also approved a provision to raise the pay of widows and dependents of servicemen who died from service-connected causes. It would pay $105 a month to the widow and first child, plus $25 a month for each additional child. Cost of this item was estimated at $7,368,000 the first year.

District Court Asked to Delay 2 Executions

District Court was petitioned yesterday to postpone the execution of George A. and Lawrence J. Garner, who are due to die Friday in the electric chair.

Louis Jongbloet, attorney for the Garner brothers, told the court that the Pardon Attorney has not yet acted on their petition for executive clemency addressed to the President.

The Garners were convicted of first-degree murder in the robbery-shooting of a cab driver, Howard Jones, 27, of 217 Irving st. nw. He was slain February 27, 1948.

Utility Strike Law Upheld in Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., July 12 (U.P.).—The Wisconsin Supreme Court today upheld the constitutionality of a two-year-old State law prohibiting strikes, lockouts or slowdowns involving public utilities.

The court held the State Legislature has the power to pass such a law because of the "vital" public interest involved.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man Is Stymied by Pensive Bride Who Admits Her Dejection Is Due to Loving an Old Flame Best, But Still She Wants to Keep Husband

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is a man to do when his wife doesn't love him, or at any rate loves another man more—and yet she wants to live with her husband? That is my problem and if it isn't solved soon I fear there may be a separation of a supposedly happy couple.

Sue and I were married last year and I soon noticed that something was wrong. As the situation grew worse I questioned her and she admitted she was unhappy, that she couldn't get accustomed to married life, even after a year.

She is 22 and has said many times that she got married too young that we should have waited a few years; and when I asked her if there was someone else she said she still loved the man with whom she had been going steady before we became engaged. When I asked if she loved me, she said yes, but that her love for Harry was stronger.

She Coaxes Husband to 'Win' Her Love

THEN I BROACHED separation, something I don't want—and she replied that she would like to stay married a little longer to see if I can win her love. That seems unusual—trying to win your wife's love away from another man. But I agreed to try and still I see no change in Sue. In fact she seems more unhappy than ever.

Although I know you can't buy love, I recently sold some of my personal belongings in order to buy Sue things she wanted and take her places we couldn't afford, thinking this might reach her heart, but it hasn't. So what next?

I know I am not a perfect husband, and maybe I'm not good husband material. Maybe I am entirely at fault, and if so I am ready to face it and take your advice. But in my opinion Sue wants the kind of marriage you see in the movies—everything perfect, with me playing the Charles Boyer type. And that is strictly out of my class.

If I am at fault will you put me right; or say whether we should try the marriage a little longer or not. As things are now, I don't see how we can stay together much longer. C. B.

She Made Her Bed, as the Saying Goes

DEAR C. B.: If Sue loves Harry so much, why did she marry you at all, much less prematurely, as she now whines? In all probability she roped you in because he balked at making her his bride, after going steady and sampling her charms, and she wanted to show him that she had other alternatives.

But up against the realities of marriage to a husband of honest mind, who sincerely cares for her and wants a bonafide conjugal relationship, she finds herself frigid, it seems, still yearning for Harry's lovemaking, for which she retains a fixated preference, so that yours seems objectionable in comparison.

An unhappy situation, to be sure, but hardly a reproach to you. Rather, her misery, her defensive maladjustment, for which she taxes you, is the pay-off for her own insincerity in getting married just to be married, without "revealing her hand" and with no preparedness to abide by her bargain in good spirit.

Worried Husband Seems Blameless

ONE RESPECTS the good sense of your admission that you're no seasoned "great lover" type—and I daresay Boyer himself would disclaim that role in private life. Also it's to your credit that you want to discover and correct any faults in yourself that may be responsible for Sue's distress; and you've shown unusual patience, devotion, stability and intuitive intelligence in trying to solve the problem and save the marriage.

It was weak, of course, as I think you know, to rob yourself in order to pamper Sue's disconsolance; but by and large you seem to be excellent husband material, if given fair teamwork in developing your potentials. Sue is the author of her own dejection, and, worse yet, she is too parasitic—in an infantile neurotic way—to relinquish her grip on your bounty, even though she rejects you personally.

Because of Sue's unconsciously tricky behavior, specialist help will be required to determine if the marriage can be saved. Thus I refer you to the mental hygiene clinic in the city through which your letter came to me. There a psychiatrist and two psychologists counsel daily by interview, except Saturday afternoons. M. H.

SPONTANEOUS smiles light up the wan faces of Greek children after they don the used clothing sent by American friends. But this little band of Ioannina—near the Albanian border—were the lucky few to receive clothing from the American Women's contemporaries, as well as their parents, still live in shacks or tents, without shoes and with very few clothes

Tale of Rags and Tragedy

Greek Refugees Need Shoes Clothing

EIGHT families, each consisting of six to nine, herded together in tents 20 by 10 feet . . . No partitions for privacy . . . no beds or chairs . . . only the cold wet ground upon which to sprawl or huddle. This is the plight of thousands of refugee families in Greece, as witnessed by a group of Americans including Mrs. Robert Paige, Joanna Cutter, members of the American Women's Organization of Greece; John Hare, field representative of ECA to Lamia, and Mr. and Mrs. John White, who have been active in welfare work for 30 years.

Last March the ECA representative accompanied the group to Lamia, a hill town in central Greece between Thessalie and Athens. Normally the town's population is 20,000 but it has been swelled to 50,000 by refugees. The party found that the high mountain town of Karpenissi, until recently in the hands of guerillas, had lost 4000 of its 12,000 population in 20 days of guerilla rule.

Papas Paparupas, village priest of Tymfristos, guided the Americans on their inspection of the refugee camps. The group went for the express purpose of distributing used clothing to the most needy of all needy refugees in the some 35,000 camps in the area of Lamia. They represented the Women's Organization of Greece, which was formed late last winter. Mrs. Henry F. Grady, wife of the United States Ambassador to Greece, inspired the formation of the organization.

"All the men, women and children between 15 and 40 had been abducted," writes Joanna Chutter in a report of the trip. "Others trying to struggle through snow and ice to reach Lamia had never reached their goal.

"That was the tragic tale, many times retold in flights from Kirkello, Tymfristos and other places, that lay behind rows upon rows of shacks, Quonset huts and tents," she continues.

The most fortunate of the gee families live in huts or wooden barracks. Best of the barracks have windows, wooden walls and a metal roof.

With a few boards, brown paper and sometimes a blanket, these resourceful people contrive to make a home. Yet, no amount of courage can hide their pitiable state. The men, women and children are in rags. Nearly all are shoeless.

Last month Mrs. Paige and two other representatives of the AWOG'S welfare committee went to Ioannina near the Albanian border to distribute shoes and clothing to 400 of the 1500 most needy refugee children.

"I wish I could transmit my own feelings to each and every woman at home as I tried to squeeze little bare, hard, dirty feet into too, too few pairs of children's shoes," states Mrs. Paige.

In issuing an appeal for clothing, Mrs. Paige points out that AWOG distributes the garments personally with the advice and approval of ECA authorities. "Since direct relief of this sort is not a function of ECA, we feel that there is a real need for our activity," she explained.

Clothing sent to Mrs. Robert Paige, ECA Mission to Greece, APO 206, Postmaster, New York City, will be acknowledged and personally accounted for by Mrs. Paige.

Polish Holiday

To celebrate the national holiday of Poland, the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Winiewicz have issued invitations to a reception on Friday evening, July 22, from 9 to 11 o'clock. The reception is black tie and will be held at the embassy.

How to Be Successfully Single

By Ida Jean Kain

JUST because a girl hasn't a husband to her name is no sign she has lacked proposals—that's the new and refreshing slant taken by Jean Van Evera in "How to Be Happy While Single."

"Keeping your looks and your figure is part of being successfully single, according to the author . . . it brings a sense of well-being and high morale. Too, a variety of male companions is one advantage of the single life; and as everyone knows, the shortcut to a man's heart is through his eyes.

Not that a girl has to be ultra-streamlined, says Jean. That's just for models. Men are attracted to vital women, for vitality is irresistible. And no matter how much you owe to diet and exercise, don't talk about it. A man wants to keep his illusions—he likes to believe an attractive woman is just naturally that way.

The single life has its pitfalls of course, and boredom is sometimes one of them. But when you're lonely and the telephone doesn't ring, don't take refuge in overeating, is Jean's sage advice. The girl who is on her own in a strange place may have so little to look forward to that she starts looking forward to big meals . . . "I'm not having much fun so at least I can enjoy food—I'll take the ice cream cake." Let this become habit, and the results are sure to be proof of the old saying that you can't have your ice cream cake and eat it, too.

"Weight is insidious and can sneak up on a girl," the author warns. "One gloomy morning she looks at herself in the mirror and is appalled. Or she overhears a remark, 'Isn't it too bad about Effie? She's put on so much weight.' Remember—the first 5 excess pounds are easier to take off than the first 15.

To take the boredom hurdle, cultivate many interests outside yourself—then neither self-pity nor food will get the upper hand.

On the figure score, Jean has this tip for office workers: "If you sit most of the day, try to walk some at noon. If you move right from your desk to a restaurant chair and continue to sit . . . you'll continue to spread."

As every singleton knows, it's always more flattering to have people wonder why "an attractive girl like you" hasn't been snapped up long ago, than to let your figure and your looks go and not have them wonder.

This clever, helpful book doesn't miss a trick on How to Be Happy While Single.

Slimmer Silhouette

U. S. Designers Stick To Classic Fashions—With Peek Back to '20s

By Peggy Preston

NEW YORK, July 12.—Like a naughty jack-in-the-box who loves to tease, the fashion silhouette of the 1920's keeps springing up in these high-style collections being shown here this week.

He does not linger too long, nor take himself too seriously, and a great many of the designers slap the lid back on his box before he gets a chance to create much of a fuss, but he is still managing to make himself noticed.

Little style points, reminiscent of the "flapper" era, recur again and again. But they do not necessarily constitute a so-called "trend." They are rather like straws in the wind that tickle our fancy and may or may not leave a lasting mark.

MISS PRESTON

Slimmer Silhouette

THERE ARE such signs as these:

A general over-all slimming of the silhouette, especially noticeable in suits and coats. Padding is passe.

Shorter skirts everywhere, but in different degrees. Maurice Rentner places his at 14 or 15 inches from the floor. Herbert Sondheim likes them best at 13 or 14. Says wily Mr. Sondheim, "it depends on the type of a girl, the type of 'shafts,' and the type of dress."

The increasing importance of coats at seven-eighths length, measuring 42 incres, and ending approximately 2 inches above the dress hem. Many designers believe that this is prophetic of much shorter skirts in the next couple of years.

Easy waistlines, with no look of the clincher, and lower in back giving the effect of a long waistline. No one has had the nerve to show a belt at the hipline and we can be fairly safe in assuming that horrid fad of the twenties is not in for a revival.

Straps on evening gowns and a more "covered-up" look to the top of the daytime silhouette, balancing the barer legs.

A large number of head-hugging hats that fit low and snug around the ears and the back of the head, all but obscuring the short hairstyles.

Wearable Clothes

RANGED against the features noted above, and outweighing them by far, are good, substantial, reliable fashion items. More sane and casual than they have been in a long time, they reflect the American woman's need for wearable, comfortable clothes.

The shirtwaist dress is staging a big comeback with its simple, classic lines. It is being shown in wools, crepes and many other fabrics, for every occasion.

With the disappearance of the big, bulky skirts for daytime wear, we are seeing neater, trimmer dresses, made interesting with flying panels, godets or inverted folds. There are big collars on coats, and huge, utility pockets.

Full skirts still remain dominant in the collections of evening gowns. Even in the short ball dresses, one of which is shown in almost every collection, the great, flattering sweep of a skirt is the central point. Often they are done in layers, the top one full, the bottom one slim.

Claire McCardell, darling of the career girl, is still endeavoring to give her followers some "yardage" in their skirts. She offers no circular skirts this year, but she has done a great many finely pleated ones that are meant to "roughen" in the wearing. They give the effect of being slim, yet afford the freedom of movement which the McCardell fans cry for.

HIGHLIGHTS FROM THE COLLECTIONS: Philip Mangone's handsome broadcloth coats, with capelet and sleeves of glistening Russian broadtail . . . his three-piece cape suit, with jacket molded to look like the top of a two-piece dress . . . Joset Walker's wool jersey dresses unexpectedly handled like crepes.

Monte-Sano Suggests a Mink Tie

New York, July 12 (AP).—If you can't afford a mink coat, get a mink tie.

That's the advice of Monte-Sano, who shows narrow mink, Persian lamb and ocelot ties beneath the collars of many of his fall suits and coats. The long, narrow strips of fur are knotted casually or tied in a bowknot to add swank to untrimmed coats, and may also be used as separate neckpieces with other costumes.

Showing his advance fall collection to the visiting fashion press, Monte-Sano stressed tunics and coat dresses, introduced his new Normandy silhouette and shot the works on color and luxurious fabrics.

FUR AND TAFFETA are paired for fall and winter 1949-50 in this strapless persimmon silk taffeta evening dress under matching mink-lined jacket, designed by Monte-Sano. Two fishtails trail down the back of the straight slit-back skirt. From Monte-Sano and Pruzan's new collection, shown in New York yesterday.

Reader Tells About Japan

I am attempting to answer N. H.'s recent inquiries about Japan, as I returned from there last December. I was an employe there, had many friends among Americans.

The climate is much what it is in this country. In the northern island of Hakkaida and the northern part of Honshu around Lapparo, there are long cold winters as in upper New England; in the rest of Honshu, as in Washington, steamy summers and mild winters; in the southern island, Kyushu, weather as in our Southern States.

Now for N. H.'s questions: (1) Wear sport shoes on the ship, during the day at least. I have never heard of any special requirements, such as stadium boots. (2) You can wear pajamas or any other sleeping apparel you wish on the boat. Use nylon for all garments as far as possible, as there will be no maid service on an Army transport. (3) Better take your own books for the children and some toys, lady. (4) As you arrive in September, little warm bedding will be required and the Army will furnish bedding and G. I. blankets. The PX may or may not have them. (5) The trip should be warm in September, unless you take the northern route by the Aleutians. Some topcoats may be necessary. Probably sweaters will be enough on the southern route. (6) I'd say don't take a washer, as all your laundry will be done. If you do your own, you lose face. (7) The musical instruments you mention will have to go in the hold. Hand luggage only in your cabin. If you clutter the cabin, you will be very unpopular. (8) In time, the PX will have practically everything you need to buy. You can always order direct from shops in the United States too. Have all things sent first class and smaller things air mail. However, there is one thing I advise you to take—shoes. The PX is poor on this item. Also, it would probably be well to take girdles. Japanese dressmakers and tailors are good. Be sure to go prepared with equipment for your favorite sport, as you will have plenty of opportunity for golf, tennis, skating, sailing, hiking, swimming, and skiing. M. L.

Other letters from readers who have helpfully volunteered information on Japan are being sent to N. H.

I'm very much interested in obtaining instructions for making lampshades, since I have several that need to be made over. Any information you could furnish along this line will be appreciated. A. A.

The Young Women's Christian Association will have a class that will include instruction in lampshade making, beginning in September. If you do not wish to wait until then to renovate your shades, you will find that "The Complete Book of Modern Crafts," by H. Atwood Reynolds (World Publishing Co.) has a chapter on lampshade construction that should be helpful to you.

Can you give me a recipe for the chocolate used on eclairs?
R. H. J.

Here are directions for making a glossy chocolate icing that can be used on eclairs:

GLOSSY CHOCOLATE ICING
3 ounces (squares) chocolate
1 well-beaten egg
¾ cup evaporated milk
¼ cup water
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

MELT CHOCOLATE in top of double boiler. Combine egg, milk, water and sugar, and stir into chocolate. Cook icing over hot water for 20 minutes. Remove from the heat. Beat with rotary beater for 1 minute or until it is well blended, then stir in vanilla.

For a Diverting Day: Try The Outdoor Theater, See Jungle Jenny at the Zoo

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THERE are lots of nice things to do and see around town these sultry days and evenings. Up on Meridian Hill, culture is raising a languid head. Behind a lovely facade of spotlit fountain, pink and crimson water lilies spiking the placid reflection pool, the Washington Theater Festival has set up shop.

The audience sits in rising ranks between the stage and a statue of President Buchanan (our Taxi driver remarked with sadistic relish, "The only President to come to AND LEAVE the White House a bachelor!")

The stage itself is framed in "Theater Guild" blue cloth and the actors, with considerable ingenuity, manage to speak their lines near as possible to a series of mikes suspended from the ceiling. "The Importance of Being Earnest" is the current effort—and though the acting's not up to Broadway par, you wouldn't expect it to be—it's the outdoors, the breezes, the cokes in paper cups and the fun of seeing flesh and blood actors that count.

The ladies, incidentally, should get considerable kick out of John Buckmaster's elegant Gay Nineties clothes. They're the same outfits worn in the Cecil Beaton designed and decorated show given some years ago on Broadway. Pipe the gray frock coat (or is it a Prince Albert?), the gray topper, the mourning outfit which includes a silk hat banded funereally in black chiffon!

New Arrivals at the Zoo

LUNCHING at the Zoo is relaxing and everyone should keep up with the newest arrivals.

Things we liked especially were the "Falsechinchillas," the smallest monkeys in the world, dwarf marmosets scarcely 4 inches high, a smallish, sluggish animal, half monkey, half bear (It seemed to us) called, appropriately, a Slow Loris.

A pair ambled right side up and upside down over a tree trunk. It was first meeting for these babes from Malaya and a keeper stood guard to separate them if fighting broke out.

The Bikini pig No. 311 has put on a tremendous amount of weight—which proves, according to Zoo Boss Dr. William Mann, that radio-activity isn't reducing. This once dainty sow, after being sunk in a bombed battleship and rescued as she swam the Pacific (Pigs evidently CAN swim) weighed in at 40 pounds on arrival and tips the scales at well over 350. Help, help, Ida Jean Kain!

Jungle Jenny, the new baby elephant, is a charmer. She stands about 3 feet high, has 6-inch auburn hair all over her back, scratches herself with the right hind leg in a most ingenious manner; and, as she's just recovering from over-indulgence in peanuts, has her sweet allowance cut to two lumps of sugar daily. She's going on 3, will be a debutante at 12 and has a great weakness for sweet potatoes. She is one of six female babies flown here in a cargo plane under chaperonage of Miss Jenny Cuprys, the 24-year-old foster daughter of an animal trainer who died some years ago in Singapore.

Should anyone want a little elephant in the home, the price has skyrocketed since the war. A decade ago a take home price was around $1700 and up, now the mimimum is $3500. Jenny cost $7500.

Luncheon and Matinee

MRS. GEORGE MALONE, who dreams up the most unusual ways to entertain her pals, has figured out something new in the fun line. She's finagled a matinee special showing of "The Stratton Story," MGM's baseball epic, asked friends to luncheon first at her apartment. Then guests can remain happily aircooled for at least four hours.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

"Why Don't They Trust Me?"

As I talk with groups of youngsters in the early and middle teens about families I find their major complaint is voiced in one question, "Why don't they trust me?"

Here's the way they put it. "After all, if our parents haven't done a good job up to this point it's too late. What do they think we are going to do, anyway? Gosh, if we wanted to get away with anything, it would be easy enough. Not having mother trust me makes me feel like living up to her expectations—she seems always to fear the worst."

It is a problem for those of us who have children in this age group. We read and hear about all the things that are going on. We know that we should treat the "kids" as grown-ups but it's hard, for they still seem like younger children to us. But the youngsters have a pretty good point.

If we haven't helped them build up standards of behavior by this time, it is too late. All we can do effectively is to stand by, be ready to help if ever there is any trouble, and give them the strength that comes to a person when he knows that somebody he cares about has confidence in him.

They're Loving Married Couples, But as Skaters They're Parted

By Sonia Stein

"SKATING with your husband is like having your husband teach you to drive," said Mrs. June Hutchinson. "That's right," Mrs. James R. Niles agreed with feeling.

It's not that their husbands aren't good skaters. As a matter of fact, Mr. Niles is currently on loan to Mrs. Hutchinson as a skating partner for the 1949 roller skating championship competition being held this week at Riverside Stadium.

And E. E. Hutchinson is entered in the foursomes division with Miss Mary Palmer, Bruce Lackey and Miss Mary Mierke. Mrs. Niles picked her partner for the novice dance division from the bachelor list. He is red-headed 22-year-old John Pritchett.

All of the skaters involved in this criss-cross are Washingtonians, since it is necessary to be from the same region, if not the same household, to be partners in this national amateur competition.

Just Marital Partners

MR AND MRS. NILES met at Riverside Stadium. They considered each other good skates all right, and they got married 19 months ago, but as for skating with each other, except for an occasional social diversion, the answer is no!

"Our styles are different," says Barbara Niles who skated in competition before she was married. Besides, at 107 lbs. she looks too tiny next to her husband's rugged 175. He's 6½ inches taller than she is, too.

"It saves arguments, not to skate together," pretty, 19-year-old Mrs. Niles explains. "Yes, it certainly does," agrees her husband.

When the Niles couple comes to the rink to practice, which they do "practically eight hours a day, every day of the year," they see very little of each other except at 20 paces. Champion roller skaters are made by constant practice of formal figures, and these are practical alone.

All of the skaters agree that married couples seldom make champions. Partners who chose each other for similarity of style, may eventually get married and become champions. But if they choose to skate together just because they're married, they aren't apt to be successful.

It's a harder problem than dancing in which married couples are sometimes tops because, as Mr. Niles remarked grimly, "When you dance there aren't any lines you have to follow." Skaters must be able to skate around a prescribed circle on the floor.

"Yes," chimed in Mrs. Niles, "and if you lean a little the wrong way it spoils it. The girl always gets blamed anyhow if it doesn't come out right, and it's hard enough without it being your husband," she said, beaming affectionately at that gentleman.

Mrs. Hutchinson has been married for 10 years and has been skating even longer. A curvaceous, womanly type, with long blond hair which she keeps out of her way when skating by piling it on top of her head, Mrs. Hutchinson is a good skating match for Mr. Niles. Her own husband, who will be competing in the foursomes this year, towers some 7 inches above her.

Admires Her Style

THE HUTCHINSONS discovered long ago that for competition work they did better with other partners than with each other. But Mr. Hutchinson often comes to watch his attractive wife practice at the stadium.

The married skaters agree that couples just going together have the worst time of it, when it comes to skating amicably. "They want to skate with each other, and yet they may not like each other's skating," Mr. Niles explains. They get jealous of other skaters "dancing" with their one-and-only, and all in all they aren't very happy.

Mr. Pritchett, who skates with Mrs. Niles, intends to remain a bachelor—for a while anyway. "I like to skate with all the girls," he remarked.

Of course married skaters are sympathetic to each other's problems. When Mrs. Skater needs new skates, Mr. Skater understands. Actually, the boots last about a year, the skates "forever." Only the wheels give out; they're wooden and have to be replaced when they wear down.

The girls' costumes, curiously enough, aren't much of an expense, because the girls make them. It is possible to buy roller skating costumes in large cities, but most of the girls take pleasure in making their own. It costs about a dollar or two for material and findings to make a simple skirt. Mrs. Hutchinson estimates that she has 15 skating dresses and 15 skating skirts. Mrs. Niles thinks she has about the same. She's sure she has more skating than street costumes.

7000 Sequins!

FOR THIS WEEK'S championship competition, Mrs. Niles—who was in yesterday's events—made "a sea-green costume with circular skirt and matching marquisette underskirt." The top is solid sequins and there are 7000 of them (count 'em; Mrs. Niles did) each sewed on separately.

Mrs. Hutchinson made a new black crepe dress with leaf-like gold sequin pattern for this year's event, but she isn't going to wear it in the Senior Dance event which takes place Friday, after all. It wasn't finished in time for the District competition so she wore last year's dress in which she'd won second place in the nationals. And since she had good luck in the Distri finals in that dress—which is black with sequins, too—and in the regional finals, well . . .

One on the Aisle—

Wildeless 'Fan' Deals Dull Blow

By Richard L. Coe

THE SHEER BRILLIANCE with which a covey of Hollywood bricklayers has obliterated all traces of Oscar Wilde from something they're calling "The Fan" is on exhibition at the Playhouse.

This crashing bore, they say, is "based on Oscar Wilde's 'Lady Windermere's Fan,'" but it's as much like the original as "Little Orphan Annie." In fact, it's more like Orphan Annie.

For Walter Reisch, Dorothy Parker and Ross Evans to have made such a consummately dull picture from Wilde's second-best comedy must be called something of an achievement. Once or twice they permit a Wilde epigram to fall thuddingly from the lips of Madeleine Carroll, George Sanders or Martita Hunt, but most of the time they've thought up cliches of their own.

It really stuns the mind to consider what a complete botch has been made of this popular play. Wilde's plot was nothing much to begin with; what gave it distinction at all were his lines and approach to a situation that was dated in the Nineties. He was telling, you may recall, of Mrs. Erlynne, a shady lady of the late Victorian era, intent on crashing London society. Her single virtue came from sacrificing her own potential position by saving the face of her daughter, Lady Windermere, who'd been laboring under the delusion that Lord W. had been paying court to an adventuress she didn't know was her own mother.

This plot was considered daring 50 years ago not because of its situation, but because such a sophisticate as Wilde had bothered to tell so corny a yarn. He got away with it by dressing it up in bright lines and artifice. The new picture takes the story with grim, slow solemnity.

It is now told in the inevitable flashback. A present-day London auctioneer is disposing of an old fan, which prompts an aged lady in his audience to reminisce over the fan's adventures half a century before. The lady is Mrs. Erlynne, fearfully played by Miss Carroll, and the scriptwriters have the gall to suggest that in their eighties Mrs. Erlynne and Lord Darlington, the rake of the piece, will soon be going steady.

To go any further into this weary charade is pointless. The playing is uniformly foolish, the dullness of Otto Preminger's production and direction so totally misleading, that I can only urge you to avoid "The Fan" as you would the plague.

ESTELLE WINWOOD is a considerably more cheerful person to write about. . . . Estelle is spending her summer vacation from "The Madwoman of Chaillot" by playing one of her favorite roles, Lady Bracknell in Wilde's finest comedy, "The Importance of Being Earnest," the Meridian Hill play reviewed yesterday on this page. . . . "Darling," she says, "do urge people to come to see me. I'm on percentage this week you know and each seat that's sold means money to me." . . . This is not generally the way actresses talk to reviewers, so I pass it along as an example of Winwood aplomb. . . . Actually, Estelle feels that acting in the open air is the hardest thing in the world and she claims it takes a performance or so to find one's right voice for the plein air as we say en France. . . . So Estelle and I have a bet: if her percentage hits a certain figure, she buys me a dinner. . . . Mad thing, isn't she?

Repair Houses or Tear Them Down Is Edict in Alexandria

Owners of 12 substandard houses in Alexandria have been ordered to make necessary sanitary and building repairs by August 1 or tear them down.

Councilman Marshall J. Beverley asked the City Council to take a firm stand by instructing City Manager Robert S. Marshall, jr., to see that repairs are made or that the houses be condemned.

City officials said all the houses are owned by Robert F. Sisson of Morrisville, Va., except one at 438 South Columbus st., reported owned by Mrs. Agnes Sisson.

City Building Inspector A. R. Lash said all 12 buildings are in a dangerous condition. He said he has served notice on the owners to make repairs or tear down all 12 by August 1.

Plumbing Inspector V. E. Beagle reported all the houses "unfit for human habitation."

City Manager Marshall, who is on leave as director of the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority, said that if these houses are torn down the problem of housing evicted tenants will confront the city.

At Marshall's recommendation the council voted to create a committee to consult with the city planning commission and housing authority. The committee will comprise Councilmen Albert A. Smoot, Leroy S. Bendheim, R. Samuel Luckett and Beverley. It will also investigate what help the city can expect from the slum clearance provisions of the proposed Federal housing bill.

Probers Start Raising Wreck Of Death Boat

Work began at low water last night to raise the wreck of the cruiser Halycon in which an Army general and a wartime Navy hero were killed Sunday afternoon.

Diving crews at the Corinthian Yacht Club, 2d and V sts se., where the 38-foot vessel exploded, attempted to lash empty barrels to the sunken stern. High water, it was hoped, would lift the boat enough to get it beached.

Both the fire marshall's office and police homicide squad were waiting to get a look at the blasted wreck which cost the life of Maj. Gen. Vernon E. Prichard and Commodore Wilfred L. Painter, USNR.

After an investigation at the scene of the explosion and interrogation of witnesses, both agencies still held the belief that the blast was caused by gas vapors in the bilges.

The Coast Guard has scheduled a formal investigation to begin within a week. Bolling Powell, jr., owner of the boat, who was not aboard when it exploded, yesterday said he had bought the wreck back from the insurance company for $50 and was planning to make a personal investigation.

Of the eight other persons aboard, three were still in the hospital. Capt. Sergius N. Ferris Luboshez, a guest, and Johannes Johannesen, 40-year old steward, were still in critical condition. Thomas L. Miller, 23, the skipper, was in fair condition at Casualty Hospital.

Reunited After Half-Century, Danish Brothers Visit Here

The Washington Post

AFTER 53 YEARS—The Reberhold brothers, Bertel, 71, and Olaf, 73, are reunited last night at 6501 Sligo pkwy., Hyattsville, Md. Both were born in Denmark

By John London
Post Reporter

In an immaculate Green Meadows bungalow, two Danish-born brothers are trying to catch up on half a century of memories.

For the first time in 53 years the brothers Reberhold, from the Danish fishing village of Fredvickshavn, are reunited.

At the home of relatives, 6501 Sligo pkwy., Olaf Albert, 73-year-old retired fireman from Copenhagen and Bertel, 71, retired exhibit preparer at the National Museum, are swapping reminiscences. Olaf arrived the other day for a month-long visit.

Of stolen licorice and the twanging birch of old gray-bearded Teacher Sorensen . . . The death of their parents; the unfolded destinies of scores of friends and relatives . . . Memories barbed and mellow, of these things they talk, now haltingly, now in rushing words.

The reunion is at the home of Mrs. Eva Mitchell, Bertel's daughter, crowded with a host of visiting offspring who find the sight of the brothers together a heart-tugging marvel and joy.

With Bertel is his daughter, Ellen, 54, a cigarello-smoking secretary from Copenhagen.

Though the brothers bear a marked resemblance in facial structure, high cheek bones and sloping foreheads, broad noses and green eyes, they confessed they would never have recognized each other if they had passed on the street.

It was with Livingston-Stanley restraint that they greeted each other after 58 years.

"Ah, Olaf, it has been a long time . . ." said Bertel. "Yes, it has, Bertel," replied the brother.

But from then on the door of restraint gradually opened and down memory lane strolled the brothers Reberhold.

Prince Georges Hospital Row Still Unsettled

The controversy between the Prince Georges County commissioners and the Prince Georges County General Hospital board of directors over who has the right to appoint a new hospital superintendent was still in progress yesterday.

Informed at their meeting in Upper Marlboro that the hospital directors had taken matters into their own hands and had named an appointee, the commissioners instructed their attorney, Jerrold V. Powers, to confer with the directors on the question of jurisdiction.

After it was disclosed last week that Supt. A. K. Besley intended to leave his post September 1, the commissioners formally resolved to name his successor.

The hospital directors, however, claimed that the hospital by-laws authorize them to make the appointment and at a closed meeting last Tuesday, named Asst. Supt. Harry W. Penn, jr., as acting superintendent, effective September 1.

The commissioners yesterday made it plain that they had no objections to Penn's appointment but they wanted to get it straight over who had the right to name him.

Hospital sources yesterday pointed out that the county contributes only $30,000 to the half-million-dollar annual budget of the hospital and that heretofore the directors operated the hospital.

In other business yesterday the commissioners received notice from Gov. W. Preston Lane that he had appointed William S. Wise of Clinton, Md., and Clyde I. Fletcher, 3413 Rhode Island ave., Mount Rainier, as committing magistrates for their respective communities.

The commissioners approved a request by the College Park Town Council that the county again take over maintenance of the 7 miles of former county roads in the town. The county has done this for the past two years in return for the $400 per mile which the town gets from the State.

Also approved was an additional appropriation of $2220 to increase salaries of inspection, survey and engineering draughtsmen in County Engineer Arthur V. Tayman's office.

Postlude

Symphony's New Cellist Proves Worth

By Paul Hume

The position of first cellist of the National Symphony Orchestra is in good hands for next season.

When Howard Mitchell, now conductor of the orchestra, stepped up to the leader's desk, he left a vacancy hard to fill. For 15 years he had been first cellist, an extremely important spot in any orchestra—much like that of a pitcher on a ball team.

His place has been taken by John Martin, who gave his first Washington recital last night in McMahon Hall of Catholic University. Martin trained under both Mitchell and Gregor Piatigorsky, world-renowned cellist. His eminent qualifications were apparent at every point during last night's recital.

He programmed sonatas by Handel and Shostakovich, a Sonatina by Bernard Wagenaar, variations by Beethoven on a theme of Mozart, and short piecs of Schumann and Saint-Saens. His playing is at all times musically assured and technically proficient. His tone is rich and smooth in full sonorities, and amazingly sure and clear in soft work.

The nobility of Handel's G. Minor Sonata was superbly set forth. This music is so great in stature it is a shame we do not hear it more often. Th Shostakovich sonata is a far less valuable piece. Its weaknesses seem to occupy more time than when we first heard it and its beauties seem to come less often. Still what there was in it Martin brought out admirably.

His pianist was Charlotte Dunham whose best work came in the fine sonatina of American Bernard Wagenaar. Here she played with a big style she had previously held down. The constant melodic inventiveness and formal interest of this piece make it listenable throughout. The harmonics on the lower strings in this piece seemed easy to Martin last night, even in the face of the high humidity, a tricky foe for any string player.

The Schumann Fantasy and a short show piece of Saint-Saens concluded the recital. We are fortunate to have so fine an artist as new first cellist of the National Symphony. It will also be a pleasure to hear John Martin again in recital whenever he can find time to prepare another solo appearance.

Schools Ready Despite Strikes

The Alexandria School Board last night received assurance that despite the recent strikes in the building trades, one new school and additions to existing buildings, will be ready for use when school opens this fall.

The new building is the 17-room Ficklin School which will serve elementary grade school students in northeast Alexandria. Other jobs which builders have promised will be ready September 1 are a six-room addition to the MacArthur School and a nine-room addition at Maury School.

George Washington played a leading part in the building of the academy, said to the oldest schoolbuildings in northern Virginia.

The board last night also (1) re-elected Josiah S. Everly to a second one-year term as chairman of the school board; (2) appointed James B. Ford track coach at George Washington High School, and (3) raised tuition fees for out-of-town students from $110 to $120

The Lyons Den By Leonard Lyons

AT THE Algonquin yesterday Gerald Kersh told the story of Jack Beddington, the wartime head of the film division of the British Ministry of Information. His family name originally was Moses. When Jack was 10, his father settled in Beddington and changed the family name from Moses to Beddington—and into the youngster's head was drummed the fact that the name no longer was Moses, but Beddington—not Moses, but Beddington . . . Moses . . . Beddington . . . And so at school, when the boy was called upon to read an excerpt from "Exodus," he read: "And the Lord said unto Beddington . . ."

Lyons

Beddington was not the first head of the MOI's film division. The first one was a titled Londoner who, one day, received a phone call from a government official who asked him: "Do you know anything about pictures?" He replied: "Of course. I know a great deal about pictures." He immediately was named head of the film division—a post from which he resigned three days later, because he had misunderstood the word "Pictures." He knew a great deal about Rembrandts, Picassos, Renoirs, Da Vincis—but nothing about moving pictures.

A STUDY of the United States Supreme Court decisions of the past year showed Justice Robert Jackson swinging out against some of his colleagues, but not against Justice Frank Murphy. Jackson worked under him when Murphy was Attorney General, and succeeded him in the Cabinet post . . . When he was asked to comment about taking over Murphy's job, Jackson said, "I am in the position of a man marrying the widow of Perfect Husband who had died during the honeymoon."

ROBERT MONTGOMERY has in his possession a letter from J. Edgar Hoover for use in a trip the screen star made to Europe before the war. He never has been able to use the letter. When he arrived in London and went to Scotland Yard to see its operations, before he could present the Hoover letter he was recognized and received most cordially.

THE NEW YORKER, which frequently prints a "Which Publication D'Ya Read?" feature, reprinting, side by side, conflicting statements from newspapers and magazines, received an ad submitted by Rineheart & Co. It was an ad for R. C. Hutchinson's book, "Elephant and Castle." On one side was a reprint from the New Yorker's review of the book, calling it "long-winded . . . confused . . . bloodless . . . fuzzy." On the other side were excerpts from seven other reviews, giving it fine notices. The ad was headed "What Publication D'Ya Read?" set in New Yorker type. The magazine refused to accept it.

THE DOMESTIC SCENE

Q. A young couple moved frequently because the husband had trouble keeping jobs. When their son was 3, he got sick, largely because of the haphazard living conditions, so they put him in care of his father's mother, in State A. Tiring of the nomad existence, the wife left her husband and got a job in State B. She tried to get the child, but a court in State A decreed that he was to stay with the grandmother "until further order." A year later the husband and wife resumed living together in State A, and the grandmother turned the child over to them, with no further court action. Then when the husband couldn't support her, the wife left him again, taking the child to State B, where she got a job and made a home for the boy. The grandmother comes to State B, demanding the boy and citing the court order of State A. Is she entitled to get him?

A. Not necessarily. The court where the child is will always inquire into his present circumstances, regardless of what some other court at some other time has done. Other things being equal, the mother would be preferred to the grandmother as custodian. "Care must be taken that the child is not tossed about like a ball between the contesting parties." F. L. D.

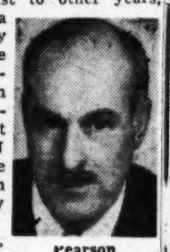
The Kremlin Sheaths Its Saber

By Drew Pearson

Here are two international developments which may or may not be related:

1. In contrast to other years, there is not a sign of military activity on the Russian horizon. American intelligence reports that never since VJ Day has there been less sign of military preparation.



Pearson

2. Last spring, Europe was booming. The Marshall Plan was hailed as a great success. Russia adopted a consiliatory policy. United States diplomats almost keeled over when the Russians proposed ending the Berlin blockade.

Then two things happened:

Between the talks in April and May, and the Paris conference in June, appeared the first cracks of depression. British business began to slump. American unemployment rose.

Immediately Russian policy shifted. At Paris, Vishinsky was polite but obstinate. The conference was a failure. In Berlin, the blockade was only partly lifted.

It looked as if the Russians figured the big break they had been looking for—depression—had arrived. Also they probably figured that the more sabre-rattling in Moscow, the more money would be spent on armament in Washington, with more resultant industrial activity and business prosperity. Likewise the less military activity behind the Iron Curtain, the more chance of economic doldrums outside.

Whatever the Russians figured, that has been the result. And we all know what Moscow wants most is world-wide depression—after which she could go around picking up the pieces.

Causes of Crisis

The British monetary collapse—which also extends in varying degree to other west European countries—is due to failure to produce as much as is consumed, which is induced by lack of labor efficiency, outmoded machinery and loss of colonies.

There is another factor—failure of the Marshall Plan to cope with Europe's basic problem of economic barriers. Italian Foreign Minister Count Carlo Sforza remarked last year:

"Our only salvation is a United States of Europe. We can never be economically self-supporting as long as we are cut up by nationalistic boundaries. Moreover, we will never abolish war until we banish nationalism. And we won't banish nationalism by ourselves. We can only do it if you put the pressure on. You can do it through the Marshall Plan. You are the only people who can make us set up a United States of Europe. But you will have to be tough. Otherwise the Marshall Plan will be only a chapter—a pleasant chapter, but a passing one."

Plan's Weak Spot

Sforza was right. The British crisis has proved the Marshall Plan is going to be a passing chapter. Its administrators have broken down no real barriers. We put the cart before the horse. The Marshall Plan before the Atlantic Pact. It is impossible to persuade France she does not need her own steel industry, that Belgium could better manufacture steel for her, as long as there is no political alliance in Western Europe guaranteeing steel to France in case of war.

Now that Belgium and France are aligned under the North Atlantic Pact the need of each country to have its own steel industry is not vital.

The same might be said of Italy's Fiat automobiles. If European trade barriers and political boundaries were broken down, one or two auto factories could supply all Europe's needs. Yet each country wants its own motor car production. Automobile plants can be turned into tank and airplane factories. With the North Atlantic pact, this is less necessary. With a United States of Europe, it would not be necessary at all.

Krug's Doctor Denies Report by Pearson

By the United Press

Secretary of the Interior Krug's physician yesterday branded as "inaccurate" and "irresponsible" a report by Drew Pearson that the Cabinet member is seriously ill with "athlete's heart."

Dr. R. Lyman Sexton said in a letter to Pearson that he was "deeply incensed" by a column which reported Krug is "very sick" and that "either pride or devotion to duty forces him to keep up the pretense of official activity."

"He is a completely well man and physically able to, and does perform twice the amount of work of the average man," Sexton wrote.

His letter, addressed to "My dear Mr. Pearson" and signed "yours truly," was made public by the Interior Department. He said he had been Krug's physician ever since he joined the Cabinet and that Krug is physically tougher than any official he has treated in the past 25 years.
